Unlimited Power to Arm Britain Given Roosevelt In Lend-Lease Bill Approved by Party Leaders; English Capture 100 Planes, Sweep Past Tobruk

Duce's Wings Clipped

CAIRO, Jan. 9.—British motorized troops were declared today to be driving far beyond Tobruk as the Royal Air Force in one of the most general aerial offensives yet loosed in Africa, put out of action 60 more Italian planes.

This boosted announced Fascist plane losses to 100 for two days.

British troops were apparently drawing about Tobruk a semicircle of steel such as smashed Bardia.

Some British field units, said R. A. F. headquarters, had penetrated the desert west of Tobruk as far as Gazala, 40 miles away, and there seized 35 Fascist warplanes that had been put out of action by British bombers.

British general headquarters rounded out the picture in a single sentence:

"While preparations for the reduction of Tobruk are proceeding, our mechanized forces are now operating west of the town."

R. A. F. Ranges Far

R. A. F. bombs were declared to have fallen on Italian positions along the Libyan coast extending to the Port of Bengasi, 300 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Gazala itself was heavily attacked, and at Benina a British communiqué reported that 100 Italian war planes were bombed on the ground, "several" of them having been smashed and others badly damaged.

At Bengasi, "four or five" ships were hit squarely, it was said, and the port's warehouses were set afire, and near the fortified oasis of Giarabub, far to the south of Tobruk, Italian motorized caravans were attacked. Other dispatches said Fascist troops were evacuating Giarabub.

Gibson Heads Aid-to-Allies Unit, Succeeding White

New York, Jan. 9 (AP).—Ernest W. Gibson, 39-year-old lawyer and former Republican Senator from Vermont, tonight accepted the chairmanship of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, succeeding William Allen White, Kansas newspaper editor who resigned last week.

The committee announced that Lewis W. Douglas, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. and former Budget Director, would divide with Gibson the work formerly undertaken by White "because of the heavy increase it has undergone."

Quite Mad, Y'Know

Fighting Anzacs Make Libyan Desert Bloom With Laurels

By Charles Collingwood
United Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 9.—Military experts here claim that the Australians are "the finest fighting troops on earth"—a reputation earned in France and at Gallipoli in the World War and now being enhanced in Libya.

The Australians are big, long-legged men who fight with a wild look in their eyes and a song on their lips. The story of how they captured the Italian base at Bardia singing "The Wizard of Oz" and "Waltzing Matilda" has gone around the world.

"Waltzing Matilda" is the famous Australian tramp song, full of strange words peculiar to the people "down under."

British army officers are appalled at the free and easy conduct of the Australian soldiers. There is little "spit and polish" among the Aussies. The officers and men fraternize and address each other by their first names and only salute when absolutely necessary.

British officers were deeply shocked at the story of an Australian colonel who addressed his men before an inspection by a high dignitary.

"... and for God's sake," the colonel said, "don't any of you men call me Bert."

The Australians love fighting and it was said that the only Aussies disappointed at Bardia were those put in charge of the captured Italians. The British thing they are quite mad.

They have a battery that would put American Indians on the war path to shame. It is a sort of high-pitched yell that can only be translated as "coo-o-o-y."

The Australians are magnificently led by officers and men of daring, initiative and intelligence. Gen. Iven Mackay is known as "Iven the Terrible." He won fame at Gallipoli where he was wounded. Later he served in France where he was decorated many times. Before the present war he was headmaster at Cranbrook School in Sydney, and many of his former pupils now are serving under him.

Nazi Fliers Stab Back at London For Assaults On Reich Ports

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Jan. 10.—German bombers hammered at London and spread over all Britain last night and early today, ending a 3½-night lull with an apparent effort to repay the R. A. F. for heavy raids on Wilhelmshaven and Emden throughout Wednesday night.

The "raiders-passed" signal sounded here after scattered attacks on the capital and elsewhere, mostly by single bombers.

Firemen rushed to extinguish one blaze in London. A high explosive bomb which fell in one crowded street before midnight caused several casualties.

Come "Hot and Strong"

Bombs fell in two other London areas as planes came in "hot and strong" over the city's outskirts.

Liverpool was named among the Mersey-side towns visited at intervals, but over several hours only one fatality was reported there.

Points in South Wales and the west of England reported new visitations. In south England, an explosion in the sky during an anti-aircraft barrage shook houses 10 miles away.

A bomb crashing in a London street caused an unidentified number of casualties.

Upon a northwest town there was a shower of fire bombs, but no known damage resulted.

The R. A. F. struck in a seven-hour raid Wednesday night and early yesterday on the naval coasts of Wilhelmshaven and Emden, the six ministry disclosed.

Flying all the way through snow, the British bombers were declared to have lighted large fires in both ports. One of these blazes, just west of Wilhelmshaven's Bauhafen harbor and its slips, drydocks, submarine and shipbuilding yards, was reported visible to home-bound pilots some 50 miles away.

"Later at night even a larger fire blazed up in the southern corner of the harbor," said a descriptive bulletin.

The bombing of Emden, was said to have resulted in "a satisfactory catalogue of large fires" in docks and shipbuilding yards.

Essex Is Attacked

Other bombs were dropped on and beside hangars and barracks on the island of Borkum, opposite Emden harbor; supply and anti-aircraft ships were attacked from a low level and one bomber swooped below 1,000 feet to bomb a big railway bridge south of Essex and machine-gun a convoy of trucks, the account added.

The Germans reported a large scale British attack Thursday night on industrial centers of western Germany, but claimed one plane was shot down and most of the others turned back by anti-aircraft guns, barrage balloons and night fighters.

At home, Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair announced a training plan which will open the Royal Air Force to boys of 16 and up "to meet a growing demand for pilots."

Prime Minister Winston Churchill reviewed and shook hands with the 50 members of a volunteer American motorized unit of the British home guard.

U. S. Pressure Stays Aircraft Plant Walkout For Two Days

Pressed from Washington in a last-minute telephone conversation with a representative of the Defense Commission, union leaders last night agreed to a 48-hour extension of the deadline for a threatened strike at the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corporation at Farmingdale, N. Y.

Herbert Harris, assistant to Sidney Hillman, labor member of the commission and cohead of the Office of Production Management, said John Owens, a commission representative, had arranged for the time extension in a telephone conversation with Walter Smethurst, national director for the aviation industry for the C. I. O.

Strike Reported Voted By Chevrolet Workers

Flint, Mich., Jan. 9 (AP).—Carl Swanson, regional director of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), announced tonight that workers in the Chevrolet factory of the General Motors Corporation here had approved a strike by a vote of ten to one.

Taking of the vote, which will affect approximately 12,000 men, was ordered after it was charged that the corporation had violated certain provisions of the union-corporation grievance procedure.

Swanson said results of the vote would be sent to the international executive board for consideration before any local action was taken.

national director for the aviation industry for the C. I. O.

A short time before expiration of the deadline at 7:45 p. m., and while officials of the company and the United Automobile Workers Union were in conference with a Labor Department conciliator, Owens telephoned. He asked that the negotiations continue and that the strike be held off for at least two days.

Outside Pressure Reported

His request granted, Owens left here by plane and it was reported he would join in the strike conference at Farmingdale early today.

Word reached here late last night also that striking United Automobile Workers had voted to accept a compromise contract with the International Harvester Co.'s truck plant, ending the strike which has tied up National Defense contracts there for nine days. The agreement provides for resumption of work by the 3,200 employees Monday morning.

Harris said that the commission representative's plea at Farmingdale was based on the desire of defense authorities to make certain that all possibility of peaceful settlement of labor disputes are exhausted before resort to strikes.

Labor representatives of the commission declared that the Fairchild company has been under heavy pressure from large interests in the aviation industry not to yield in the dispute. The large interests were described as anxious to make the Fairchild company a small and more likely to arouse public sympathy than a larger concern. It was said.

Hopkins Gets To London in Midst of Raid

HARRY HOPKINS

By International News Service

London, Jan. 9.—Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's special envoy to Britain, arrived in London tonight in the middle of a German air raid—the first in four nights.

He was driven in an automobile from one of London's principal railway stations to the accompaniment of thunderous anti-aircraft cannonading. The station and streets were blacked out as the American emissary received his "initiation" into wartime life under the "blitz."

The station platform was barricaded and heavily guarded when the special train, carrying Hopkins from an English airfield where he had landed from Lisbon, pulled in.

No persons were admitted except officials who greeted Hopkins and a few newspapermen. Smiling, Hopkins told the correspondents "I feel fine, but I cannot say anything about my visit tonight."

He was accompanied aboard the train by Prime Minister Winston Churchill's secretary, Brendan Bracken, who had met him in the afternoon at the airport.

40 Thai Planes Reported Lost

By the Associated Press

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Jan. 9.—French military authorities tonight claimed destruction of at least 40 Thai (Siamese) warplanes as brisk border fighting shifted to air and artillery battles.

The French did not mention land activity, implying there was no change since earlier tonight, when a general withdrawal of five to ten miles within the frontier of Cambodia Province was acknowledged.

French seaplanes operating from Tonle Sap (Great Lake) in Cambodia aided land planes in attacking Thai airbases, the French reported as the undeclared war gained momentum.

Simultaneously, Thai planes bombed Indo-China towns and the French said there were 22 casualties at Siemreap, near the northern end of Tonle Sap.

Sporadic artillery dueling was reported in progress across the Mekong River boundary and at various points along the Cambodian border.

The French nevertheless insisted that Thailand's baby blitzkrieg—the most ambitious campaign in weeks of sporadic border fighting—was merely "fireworks."

'No Ceiling' on Assistance

By Robert C. Albright

Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

Agreement on a "no ceiling" authorization for the President to lend arms, ships and planes and communicate secret "defense information" to Great Britain and her allies was reached at the White House last night.

The bill, in its final revision, empowers the President to proceed "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law." This, without naming them, waives any possible restrictions in either the Johnson Act or the Neutrality Act.

President Roosevelt, together with his Congressional leaders and defense advisers, agreed to speed the blanket loan-lease authorization bill to a waiting Congress today.

House Majority Leader McCormack will introduce the proposed "Act to Promote the Defense of the United States" in the House at noon. Senate Majority Leader Barkley simultaneously will offer the bill in the Senate.

No Limitation Imposed on Amounts

House hearings on the "all out measure" reminiscent of blank check authority granted Mr. Roosevelt to deal with the depression emergency, will open early next week before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

No limitation on the amounts of arms aid is imposed in the bill. It provides instead unrestricted authorization for Congress to appropriate from time to time such moneys as may be necessary to carry out its provisions.

In addition to such "defense articles" as weapons, munitions, aircraft, vessels, boats, machinery, tools, materials and supplies necessary for manufacture, production and processing, the President could send the embattled democracies "defense information."

This was authoritatively construed to mean the President could transfer to Britain or her non-Axis allies information on this Government's secret bomb sight as well as the bomb sight itself, or other secret devices in process of development.

Although authority specified for transfer of vessels and boats presumably would empower the President to loan destroyers and other naval units, the President is understood to have made clear that he has no such step immediately in mind.

Under the broad provisions of the measure the President could invoke the act "from time to time, when he deems it in the interest of national defense."

Neither Britain, Greece or China Mentioned

The completed draft empowers Mr. Roosevelt to authorize the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy or the head of any other department or agency of the Government to manufacture in arsenals, factories and shipyards under their jurisdiction or otherwise procure the defense articles to be transferred.

Neither Britain, Greece nor China is mentioned by name. Instead, the bill authorizes the materials "for any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States."

In his discretion, the President could sell, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of defense materials to such governments.

Mr. Roosevelt would decide on the terms and conditions upon which these nations would receive this aid. Payment or repayment might be accepted "in any kind of property or any other direct or indirect benefit which the President deems satisfactory."

Ethiopians Rise in Revolt

By the Associated Press

CAIRO, Jan. 9.—British headquarters indicated tonight another war front may develop in Ethiopia, where natives are reported to have taken advantage of repeated R. A. F. raids to rise against Italian garrisons.

Since Italy declared war, it was stated unofficially, British bombers have attacked every place of importance, including the capital, Addis Ababa, in the one-time kingdom of Haile Selassie.

Wherever possible, the British raids have been followed by attacks of native tribesmen on the Fascist garrisons, the British say.

In some instances, as reported in today's R. A. F. communiqué, the Italians have been forced to flee. A garrison driven from the post of Guba is being pursued by tribesmen who are closing in, the communiqué said.

Ethiopians also have been harassed.

British to Pass Relief for Finns

The British Embassy, acting under orders from London, yesterday announced liberalization of Britain's blockade policy to permit increased exports to Finland, but the Finnish Legation last night declared "there still remain difficulties."

The Finnish declaration was made after the British statement had been read to Finnish Minister Hjalmar J. Procopé in New York City and after Procopé had addressed an urgent appeal to Red Cross Chairman Norman Davis for 60,000 tons of United States foodstuffs for Finland.

In its statement, the British Embassy emphasized that relaxation of restrictions is contingent upon Finland's refraining from "any further neutral act." The statement referred to a reported agreement between Finland and Germany to permit "regular passage" of Nazi troops through Finnish territory.

An embassy spokesman explained that the new blockade policy would permit not only importation by Finland of relief supplies but would also lift restrictions on commodities essential to rehabilitation of Finnish economy, devastated by war with Soviet Russia.

Investigation of the agreement with Germany, the embassy stated, satisfied the British government that Finland "could still be regarded as wholly independent and neutral."

Referring to the embassy's announcement, the Finnish Legation declared that "during the autumn and up to recent times there were difficulties in getting shipments."

Churchill and Halifax Declare U.S. Can Thwart 'Uneasy Truce'

By International News Service

London, Jan. 9.—The United States tonight was confronted with the official British verdict—expressed in speeches by Prime Minister Churchill and Viscount Halifax, new ambassador to Washington—that a British victory over the Axis powers and the future of the world hinge on increasing American aid to Britain.

The addresses were delivered before a "Pilgrims' Society" send-off luncheon in honor of Lord Halifax. Churchill voiced the "fervent hope" that Lord Halifax would "prepare in a mission as momentous as any that the monarchy has entrusted to any Englishman in the lifetime of the oldest of us here."

He added:

"It is no exaggeration to say that the future of the whole world and civilization depends on the relations between the British empire and the United States."

Lord Halifax, who will go from his former post of foreign secretary to replace the late Lord Lothian as Washington Ambassador, declared it would be "impossible to overestimate" the value of the "massive industrial strength of the United States." He concluded his talk with the affirmation:

"We are encouraged by the knowledge that the will to resist this German attempt to secure world peace is as strong as ever."

Hopson Begins Five-Year Term For Utility Fraud

Lewisburg, Pa., Jan. 9 (INS).—Howard C. Hopson, former head of the billion dollar Associated Gas & Electric System, began a five-year prison term today for what Federal prosecutors called "one of the largest frauds ever perpetrated"—comprising thefts totaling nearly $200,000.

He was sentenced in New York City this morning—five years on each of 17 counts but with the terms to run concurrently—and left immediately for the Federal Penitentiary here.

No fine was asked in addition to the prison sentence because all Hopson's available assets are tied up by trustees.

Compromise Ends Strike of Chicago City Employees

Chicago, Jan. 9 (INS).—A strike of upward of 3,000 union employees against a city wage cut was ended by compromise today after the Nation's second largest city spent a harrowing five and a half hours.

During this period the city hall had neither heat, light nor much elevator service and the tens of thousands of persons in the Loop were threatened with loss of transportation facilities to their homes at the end of the business day.

The compromise wage cut agreement was reached in a four-hour conference between Mayor Edward J. Kelly, city officials and heads of the 13 A. F. of L. unions which went on strike.

The Gallup Poll War Spirit Is Highest In the South

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 9.—Study of opinion in the various sections of the United States reveals interesting geographical differences in public sentiment on war, aid to England, national defense and allied subjects.

Although Institute surveys have consistently found a high degree of national unity on issues connected with the war, the sharpest differences are between the South, on the one extreme, and the Middle West, on the other. The war spirit in the country today is highest in the South, lowest in the Middle West. The South is the most willing to aid England and to take the gamble of a possible war resulting from such aid; the Middle West is the least willing.

No section is strictly isolationist, however. Even the Middle West is less isolationist in its thinking than many political observers have believed. In a survey just completed, a majority (55 per cent) of voters in that area are willing to aid England even at the risk of war.

But comparisons between the Middle West and the South show that twice as many Midwesterners as Southerners have isolationist leanings.

The geographical capital of isolationism is the Chicago area. On the question of aid to England at the risk of war, for example, the views of people in Chicago exactly mirror the sentiment of the East Central and West Central sections—the areas comprising the Middle West.

Facts gathered by the Institute's staff of 345 field interviewers in the Midwest area, located at strategic points all the way from Cleveland, Ohio, to Cheyenne County, Neb., show currently that 45 persons in every 100 think it is more important to keep out of the war than to aid England at the risk of war. Chicago voters exactly the same way. By contrast, the data from 147 field interviewers in the South shows that only about half as many Southern voters think it is more important to keep out of the war.

A difference in attitudes is also revealed on the question whether the future safety of the United States depends on a British victory. In the Midwest, nearly 60 per cent (59 per cent) say our safety does not depend on England winning. In the South, the proportion is only about half as large (47 per cent).

Moreover, sentiment for getting into the war is more prevalent in the South than in any other section. Nearly one-fifth (17 per cent) of voters in that area say the United States goes to war against Germany now, as compared to 10 per cent in the Middle West and 12 per cent for the country as a whole.

Why is the South more belligerent, more interventionist, more war-spirited than any other area?

Many reasons have been advanced by observers familiar with the South. One is that the Southern population has the largest proportion of Anglo-Saxons, and Anglo-Saxons have the strongest sympathy for the South during the War Between the States.

A Military Tradition
Still another is the military tradition of the South, extending back to 1860 and before. The South has a high proportion of military schools and up to the time the Conscription Act was passed, the Southern States produced more volunteers for the United States Army than any other section.

The contrast is sentiment between the South and the Middle West is especially interesting because of the fact that these two areas have one dominant occupation in common—farming.

Following is a comparison of sectional opinion on a number of outstanding issues. In each table note how the South and the Middle West represent two extremes.

"Which of these two things do you think it is more important to the United States to try to do—keep out of the war, or to help England win, even at the risk of getting into the war?"

Goebbels Hints Big Offensive Is Planned

Tells Newsmen
Is 'Creative'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Jan. 9.—An apparent pause in German military operations was described by Propaganda Minister Goebbels today as "creative" and he said that Nazi offensives "run off with the regularity of a clock because preceding them have been intervals of most careful preparation."

The lull, Goebbels told foreign correspondents, "is only apparent." "German leadership knows exactly what it wants and how to do it," he said, "and it is a fatal mistake not to realize this."

Goebbels cautioned the foreign newspapermen against attributing the apparent quiet to any possible indecision on the part of Adolf Hitler's war leaders.

He recalled the prolonged inactivity of German forces on the Western Front last winter and said "on May 10 the great offensive began in the west which, in the shortest time imaginable, brought France to her knees."

Goebbels spoke at the opening of a clubroom reserved exclusively for foreign newspapermen. He said he hoped to come again to the club so that they might question him.

British bombers, slashing at the northwestern German coast in night raids, were disclosed by the German high command and Nazi naval bases where large fires were said to have been seen, and on the airbase on the island of Borkum.

The German report said most of the raiders' missiles fell in residential districts, although minor damage to an industrial plant was acknowledged.

5 French Ships May Attempt To Dash Home

Buenos Aires Reports Vessels Preparing To Defy Blockade

By John W. White

Buenos Aires, Jan. 9.—Considerable mystery surrounds plans now being rushed at the French Embassy here to send five French steamers to Marseille loaded with grain, wool and other products.

The French shipping company, Compagnie Generale Maritime, has five vessels now in port here being prepared for a voyage to Marseille.

The British Embassy says no application has been made for navigation permits for the vessels to pass through the British blockade.

Local diplomatic and shipping circles believe the Vichy government is preparing to defy the British blockade. One well-informed French source said this afternoon that it is probable French warships at Dakar and Casablanca will attempt to leave those ports to meet the steamship Mendoza, one of the ships in the South Atlantic and escort it to Marseille. It is admitted this might possibly cause another naval engagement in the South Atlantic, this time between British and French warships.

One official French source said that members of the Mendoza's crew have been formally notified in writing that their vessel probably would be involved in a naval battle.

Sailing of the Mendoza, set for today, has been postponed until Saturday.

The Mendoza's gray paint has been removed and she has been repainted as when she was a passenger liner before the war, with two large French flags on her sides. Workmen have begun a similar repainting on the S. S. Campana which, it is announced, will sail at the end of January. Three other French steamers, the Katonia, the Formose and the Aurigny, will sail on later dates, according to the Nave France Co.

British Planes Give Naples Bomb Shower

15 Buildings Admitted Hit; Palermo Also Object of Raid

By Herbert L. Matthews

Rome, Jan. 9.—A heavy Royal Air Force raid on Naples and Palermo, in which the British planes came over in waves during the night, is announced in today's war bulletin.

Judging from the communiqué, it was the heaviest series of raids yet made on Naples, which is coming to be the most sorely tried city in Italy.

The communiqué said the attack was made by "enemy warplanes in various waves." It added: "In Naples many bombs were dropped, of which the majority fell into the sea. A hospital ship and about 15 buildings were hit in the port, among them a church. In Palermo there was neither damage nor victims."

A communiqué listed Naples casualties as 5 killed and 33 wounded. Nothing worth mentioning occurred in Libya yesterday, the Italian people were told. The last mention of fighting was the reference to patrol encounters between Bardia and Tobruk in yesterday's communiqué.

In Albania, similarly, it is stated that "on the Greek front there was activity of patrols and skirmishes of a local character."

The communiqué mentions a thrilling incident of the ramming of a British submarine by an Italian destroyer, which the commander later before the war, the destroyer was described to Italian newspapers.

When the submarine launched a torpedo toward the destroyer, the Italian ship veered, the submarine fired again, and this time the lightening of its load after the torpedoes had been fired lifted the 1,500-ton craft to the surface, the Italian commander said.

"We went full speed for the hapless submarine before she could submerge, aiming at a 'soft portion' away from the gun turret and so calculated as to hit her at a right angle."

The shock of the impact was such that his own ship was carried high into the air, while those aboard the destroyer could feel the submarine rolling over and over under them. The destroyer lurched in a frightening fashion but then righted itself. Looking back, the commander said it seemed to him that the submarine had been cut in two and she went down so quickly that nobody could see her.

Back in port, naval men said they found the destroyer's prow to have been twisted and bent, but the shock had not broken through the armored plating. Strips of iron and steel from the submarine were imbedded in the metal of the prow.

Only 1,200 Americans Are Still in Japan

6,800 Have Returned
To U. S. Following
State Dept. Warning

By the Associated Press

The exodus of Americans from the Orient in response to State Department advice has brought all but 1,200 out of Japan, officials disclosed yesterday, and those remaining are prepared to leave quickly in event of a serious emergency.

More than 8,000 Americans were in Japan when the State Department three months ago issued precautionary advice to nationals in the Far East to come home.

Fewer numbers have left China and other parts of the Orient but the homeward movement is still under way and officials said evacuation would be carried out now in the Pacific with far less confusion and difficulty than the Government has experienced in getting Americans out of Europe.

The Government started the movement last October following Japan's formal alliance with the Axis powers.

Consuls were instructed to advise nationals in Japan, China, French Indo-China, Thailand, the Netherlands East Indies and other areas in Asia to return home, if possible, and to evacuate them, especially to women and children.

Three ships, the Washington, Mariposa and Monterey, were sent on special repatriation voyages and regular passenger vessels have been heavily booked with homecoming Americans, many of whom had lived for years in the Far East.

There still are 6,000 Americans left in China, only about 1,000 fewer than a year ago. Officials attributed the relatively small exodus from there, however, to the fact that most Americans were already in the country for reasons for staying already had returned home in the course of the 3½ years Sino-Japanese war.

Churchill, asserting that the solidarity of the English-speaking world will "more than any other fact determine the way of life open to generations, and perhaps centuries," significantly warned that Britain might be able to win without American help, but that she could win only an uneasy truce.

"If cooperation between the empire and the United States was to fail, the empire might hew its way through against the spirit of totalitarianism and preserve its life strength for inevitable renewal of the conflict on worse terms after an uneasy truce."

"But the chance of setting the march of mankind clearly and surely along the road of human progress would be lost and might never return. We stand, all of us, upon the watch towers of history and have offered to us the glorious opportunity of making supreme sacrifices and exertions needed by the cause which it may not be irreverent to call sublime."

Characterizing Halifax as the "best man Britain could find to replace Lord Lothian" and saying that "our choice was agreeable to President Roosevelt," the premier added:

"We send to the United States an envoy who comes from the very center of our counsels and knows all of our secrets."

Praises Roosevelt
With the British public still discussing Mr. Roosevelt's speech to Congress and his "total defense" budget message, Churchill took occasion to extol the American President, saying:

"I hail it as a most fortunate occurrence that in this awe-inspiring climax to world affairs there should stand at the head of the American Republic a famous statesman long-versed and experienced in the work of government in whose heart burns the fire of resistance to aggression and oppression."

The premier expressed joy that "this preeminent figure should have newly received an unprecedented honor—a third term."

Churchill described President Roosevelt as one "whose sympathies and nature make him a sincere and undoubted champion of justice and freedom and of the victims of wrong-doing wherever they may dwell."

He said Halifax had vowed to press the war against "Nazi tyranny" until "its last vestige is destroyed."

The new ambassador said he was "not going to strangers but to tried friends" among the American people and that he would "faithfully serve as a medium for developing the closest Anglo-American understanding."

British Seek Formula to End Weygand, De Gaulle Enmity

London Woos Commander of Strong French
North African Army as Free French
Leader Indirectly Offers Friendship

The last of four articles by reporter just back from Europe.

By Taylor Henry,

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 9.—The Free French movement, which daily is looming larger in British calculations of what it will take to beat Germany, has turned out to be one of the Churchill government's biggest headaches.

The cure for the headache may lie in the possibility of reconciliation between Gen. Charles de Gaulle, present leader of the Free French movement, and Gen. Maxime Weygand, French commander in chief in North Africa and De Gaulle's long-time superior officer.

The British frankly admit they are woefully ignorant of the details of the dispute between the two French leaders. They want him because they want support of the North African colonies and the troops there which Weygand controls. They want him because he is the most respected French leader today.

But the British already have built up De Gaulle as the recognized leader of the Free French movement. Weygand, the commander in chief who advised the French government to ask Germany for an armistice, has been criticized both by supporters of De Gaulle and by British officials.

Negotiations Under Way
For some weeks, delicate negotiations have been under way behind the scenes in London seeking a formula that will have face for both leaders and permit them to work in harmony.

French-British circles explain the problem this way:
De Gaulle and Weygand never have been friendly, even before their open break on the question of capitulation to Germany.

Weygand, as the senior ranking general of the French army and in virtual control of a greater territorial area than De Gaulle could scarcely be expected to play a subordinate role to De Gaulle.

De Gaulle is naturally reluctant to turn over the movement which he founded to a man he has never liked and whose orders he defied when he refused to accept France's surrender.

This feeling, neutral diplomatic circles in London believe, was behind De Gaulle's December 3 statement when in an interview at which Weygand's North African position was discussed, the Free French leader said his movement would welcome "any French general."

The possibility, however, that De Gaulle's feelings might be changing was seen in a broadcast he made to North Africa on December 28.

In the radio speech, believed to have been directed at Weygand, De Gaulle said:

"All French leaders, whatever may have been their mistakes, who will draw the sword which they have sheathed, shall find us by their side without excluding anyone and without any thought of ambition."

Weygand still is the war's No. 1 mystery man, but the British believe two factors are pushing him toward the Free French movement.

The first is the British success in Italy's colony of Libya which borders the French North African possessions controlled by Weygand.

Increasing German pressure on the Vichy government has led to Weygand's arrival in North Africa and the planning of the British Libyan offensive.

Weygand went to North Africa October 5.

Ten days later British War Secretary Anthony Eden was in Egypt planning the smashing drive against the Vichy army, which got under way December 9.

At that time reports were current in usually well-informed London circles that Eden had even conferred with Weygand personally on whether to Weygand personally or to the Vichy government is a question Italy particularly would like to have answered.

Should the Italian magazine Rassegna Italiana, in a bitter article, pointed out that the combination of France's African possessions and British African territories would create a "gigantic bloc" which could be used against Italy.

British sources hint that should Weygand join up, the United States would consider the majority of the French forces were on Britain's side and release a part of France's frozen gold reserves in the United States to his armies for buying supplies.

There is little question of Weygand's personal loyalty to Marshall.

Chuck Will's Widow
An interesting bird, sometimes seen by visitors to Abraham Lincoln National Park, in Kentucky, is the chuck will's widow. These birds sleep during the day, perched lengthwise on a limb, or beside a log or rock. At night they begin their duties as insect and moth catchers.

Financier Quits U.S. Trade Body In Arms Fight

May Protest Kemper Speech Attacking U. S. Defense Policy

A speech by James S. Kemper, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in which he warned businessmen that present United States policies may lead to war and called for a Congressional investigation of the arms program yesterday brought about resignation of a long-time member of the organization, who said he protested Kemper's views.

Industrial Financier, Armand May, of Atlanta, Ga., wired his resignation to Washington, the Associated Press reported. May said "the chamber wires me back that it is backing the Federal Administration in its national defense program" then he would withdraw his resignation.

Kemper spoke Wednesday before the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Chamber officials said yesterday that Kemper spoke in his official capacity as president of the Chamber of Commerce, an organization representing 1,600 trade groups with more than 600,000 members.

Kemper took direct issue in his speech with the views of President Roosevelt on national defense policy.

Pointing out that involvement in war might bankrupt the Nation, Kemper said he had information that invasion of America would be "an almost impossible task."

Further, he said that experts, whom he did not name, had advised him that the United States could best be defended by an army of 400,000 men with three-year enlistments, and even by an "adequate supply" of long-range bombers alone.

Warning against the Government's fiscal policies, the chamber head said that a study of European government had convinced him that "dictatorships, more than anything else, are receiverships."

Declaring at the outset of his address that the United States was freighted with potential dynamite, Kemper warned that modern war might change our whole social and economic system permanently into some form of closely regulated socialist economy.

"As I see it," he said, "the gravest peril we face is that the Government, with the support of minority groups, may move closely to the brink of war that events over which we have no control then may make charge of matters and force us into the struggle."

"There are numerous and respectable groups of our citizens which, under the influence of the hysteria of the moment, already are developing sentiment that tends toward our entry into the war."

Kemper referred to Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the "America First Committee" as "that distinguished retired officer of the Army, good citizen and able businessman, whose view is that American aid to England should be kept within the bounds of the laws of our country, and that aid short of war means eventual involvement."

Conceding that "we should give generous consideration to the difficulties in which England today finds itself," Kemper said Americans should examine the danger of national bankruptcy as a result of the national defense program.

He said that as a result of a trip to Europe "I realized that loss of representative government to the people of central Europe resulted not primarily from the ambition of an individual to achieve absolute power, but rather from the corruption, which required highly centralized control."

Taking issue with President Roosevelt's recent request for higher taxes to pay for defense, the Chamber of Commerce president said "many students are of the opinion that, in some categories, present taxes have already approached, if not exceeded, the point of diminishing returns."

"What would happen in the event of our unfortunate involvement in the European war staggers the imagination," he said.

Rhetorically, Kemper asked if the United States is prepared to force Spain to give up territory occupied in Morocco, to force Bulgaria to give up territory taken from Rumania, Italy to give up Ethiopia and Albania and Hungary to relinquish former Czech and Rumanian lands, Germany to yield the five nations it has conquered within the past year, Russia to give up Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia and the portions it has taken from Finland, Poland and Rumania.

He asked also if, after that, the United States would be ready to force Japan to give up its conquered parts of China.

Kemper issued statement.

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—James S. Kemper, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today he had "no idea what it was about my talk yesterday" that prompted Armand May, Atlanta industrial financier, to resign from the chamber.

"In so far as national defense is concerned I tried to make it perfectly clear that a definite determination not to intervene in European or Asiatic wars does not change our responsibility to see to it that America adequately is prepared against aggression on the part of others," Kemper said.

"The chamber and its membership have cooperated wholeheartedly to make national defense a reality not only with respect to military matters but also with respect to the sort of economic and social background that are so necessary to the maintenance of a strong national defense against encroachment from within as well as from without."

Pure-Browed Look and Sea-Siren Silhouette Hold Spotlight at 'Fashion Futures' Show

Lady Mendl Chosen 'Best Dressed' Woman in U. S.

By Mary Elizabeth Plummer Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 9.—The pure-browed look and the sea-siren silhouette, the plastic bridal gown and the pantalon skirt had a prominent part tonight in the repeat run of "Fashion Futures," the largest All-American style show ever held for the fashion trade.

They were among many talking points in a spring style review that moved for four hours toward its final highlight, the choice of "Miss Fashion Futures," from five pretty contestants from over the country. Miss Josephine Caldwell, of Philadelphia, wearing a black chiffon evening dress, was the judges' choice. Other entries were Miss Marjorie Thompson Kinsley, San Francisco; Miss Margaret Hayes, Los Angeles; Miss Gaby Dure, Chicago, and Miss Frances Fedden, New York.

Another highlight was the naming of five best-dressed women by the show's judges. In other years there were ten, but in hard times we must make sacrifices.

What They Wore

One outfit chosen by each of the five, who are in there pitching, sartorially speaking, was modeled at the show. The outfits were:

Lady Mendl, the former Elsie de Wolfe, a leading member of "The Antiques Set," which is now holding forth in New York—White shark-skin with quilted blue coat.

Mrs. Harrison Williams—Pale pink lace off-the-shoulder gown.

Mrs. Gilbert Miller, wife of the theatrical producer—Black and white silk suit, small white-flowered hat and tiny black parasol twirling.

Mrs. Byron Foy, the former Thelma Chrysler—Butt black lace with aquamarine.

Mrs. Thomas Shevlin—Sheer white lace long-sleeved blouse worn with many long strands of assorted jewels and a long accordion-pleated green and white striped satin skirt.

The Pure-Browed Look

The pure-browed look is an expression supposed to accompany the pompadour, which is still high style. Many hats were designed for a high-front hair-do, narrow as the face, and some of these hats had ribs, which made a sort of ruff of veiling or fabric around the front of the neck.

Sea-siren silhouette was shown in foundation garments of pale pastel shades, and also in cocktail suits with a "fish-tail silhouette," short in front and long in the back.

The "synthetic bride" had a long-trimmed white gown and veil made entirely of plastic.

Another new development was black synthetic straw, which fringed one dress and made a pair of shoes.

The pantalon skirt was on a gown of Greek influence. Some of the gowns in this group had accordion pleating and classic gold chain banding.

Greeks Claim Local Gains, 200 Captives

By C. L. Sulzberger Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Jan. 9.—Extensive fighting continued all day on the Albanian front and the Greeks held the initiative.

Tonight's communique states that abundant material was taken as well as 200 prisoners. The armament seized included 20 of the 81-millimeter trench mortars with which the Italians have been wreaking so much damage on Greek infantrymen during the past several weeks.

The government reported that yesterday's attack by Fascist planes on Salonica, whose effects it described as minimum, was primarily directed against three hospitals. It added that the American consul, John Johnson, visited the scene after the planes had left and ascertained that the hospitals were properly marked with red crosses.

He asked also if, after that, the United States would be ready to force Japan to give up its conquered parts of China.

Kemper issued statement.

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—James S. Kemper, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today he had "no idea what it was about my talk yesterday" that prompted Armand May, Atlanta industrial financier, to resign from the chamber.

London Statement Declares Germans Exploit Countries by Direct Levies And by Enforced Exports to Reich

New York, Jan. 9.—A tabulation stating that countries conquered by Germany have been forced to contribute more than two billion dollars toward support of the Nazi "new order" was issued by the British Press Service tonight.

The statistics were compiled officially in London and cabled to this country.

The statement said that Nazi exploitation has taken two forms: Direct levies to defray the cost of military occupation, and by enforced exports to Germany.

The total exploitation figures to November 30 were given as follows: Norway: 570,000,000 reichsmarks ($328,000,000) or 197 marks ($78.80) per person.

Denmark: 400,000,000 marks ($160,000,000) or 105 marks ($42) per person.

Holland: 465,000,000 marks ($186,000,000) or 50 marks ($20) per person.

Belgium: 400,000,000 marks ($160,000,000) or 47 marks ($18.50) per person.

France: 3,500,000,000 marks ($1,424,000,000) or 85 marks ($34) per head.

This tabulation gives a total of 5,400,000,000 marks or $2,160,000,000. The daily cost of supporting the German armies of occupation as borne by the individual victim countries of Nazi aggression, aside from the cost of shipping supplies to Germany to the limit of their ability, was given as follows:

France: 20,000,000 marks or $8,000,000.

Denmark: 1,500,000 crowns or $270,000.

Norway: Between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 crowns or from $540,000 to $720,000.

Industry Told To Put Curb On Price Rise

Metal, Textile Men Warned U. S. Will Enforce Demands

New York, Jan. 9.—Cautioning against excessive prices, Frank M. Folsom, Assistant Coordinator of National Defense purchases, said today that if industry doesn't want to be regulated and controlled, it had better seize the chance to bring itself into line without the Government having to do it.

In a discussion of textile procurement before the annual hostelry conference, Folsom said although "much business was taken at too low a price" in the early stages of the defense program, prices on later orders were "certainly high enough" and in some cases appeared to be veering out of line.

"This is important," he went on, "because if prices do go out of line business will certainly be in for a lot of Government regulation."

The National Defense Commission, he said, had not "been fiddling while London burned" and had accomplished much in the past six months.

Metal Men Warned

Baltimore, Jan. 9 (AP)—Leon Henderson, chief of price stabilization for the Defense Commission, told the Scrap Iron and Steel Institute convention today the Government is "determined" to get a sufficient supply of scrap metals for the defense program, and cautioned that "if you don't handle your business, it will be handled."

He reiterated a previous statement that unless voluntarily scrap prices were taken in reducing scrap prices, "drastic steps" for price control would be taken by the Government.

If this emergency is long sustained, and prices of all kinds get out of line," Henderson said, "numerous small steel mills and other allied industries 'will disappear'."

"We may have to come to some kind of an organization, syndicate or group to handle the problem, but we are not going to do it until we have to—it depends on whether or not you render the service."

Argentines Act To Save Neutrality

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc. Buenos Aires, Jan. 9.—Acting President Ramon S. Castillo and Guillermo Rothe, the minister of justice, presented to Congress today three bills providing heavy penalties for the publication in the press or the public declaration of any statements that might jeopardize Argentina's neutrality or that might be considered as attacks against the head of the Argentine state.

Severe penalties would also be handed out to any newspaper, magazine or person urging a change in the country's form of government.

LaGuardia May Become Assistant To President

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—The New York Times says it understands that President Roosevelt has offered to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia the post of executive assistant to the President in charge of coordination of national defense efforts.

"If Mayor LaGuardia should take the job, it will mean, it was said in Washington, that he would be the link between the President and all defense efforts," the newspaper said.

In his message to the city council yesterday, the mayor said that any man in the council chamber would respond to the call of duty in the national emergency, adding that no one in the city government was indispensable.

Reporter Terms Invasion of U. S. Remote Possibility

Should the Germans somehow capture the English fleet it would take them two years to utilize it against the Western Hemisphere, Edward T. Foillard, Washington Post reporter, said, tonight at a meeting of the Town Hall group at the Jewish Community Center.

Foillard spoke on the topic, "Is a Hitler Defeat Essential to the United States?"

The meeting was held in cooperation with America's Town Meeting of the Air broadcast from New York City over the National Broadcasting Co. network. Joseph M. Tuchman was local chairman.

Failure of the Nazis to cross the 20-mile English Channel was cited by Foillard as reason to consider it extremely remote that the Nazis could successfully invade the United States.

Crab-Meat Cannery Ask 50% Tariff Boost to Spur Industry

Spokesmen Say That, With Protection From Japanese Competition, Business Would Achieve Tenfold Expansion

The United States Tariff Commission yesterday was told that a 50 per cent increase in the duty on canned crab meat would result in a ten-fold expansion of the American crab meat canning industry within the next four years.

Sterling G. Harris of Port Royal, S. C., chairman of the American Crab Packers Committee, testified that the low price of Japanese lines of crab meat now bars the American product from any retail outlet in some sections of the country.

"Given a reasonable opportunity to compete in the market, our industry can employ thousands more, yield greater tax revenues to the Government and increase the national income," Harris said.

Cost 400 Their Jobs

Harris said the declared value of Japanese canned crab meat imported into this country in 1940 was 30.3 cents per pound, while it cost 46 cents per pound to deliver the product from his South Carolina plant to the New York market.

The Japanese competition narrowed his market to such an extent that he was forced to lay off 400 employees last November, Harris added.

Members of Congress who appeared or filed statements yesterday in support of the American producers were Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee; Ward (Democrat), of Maryland; Boggs (Democrat), of Louisiana; Colmer (Democrat), of Mississippi; and Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana.

C. T. Riote, counsel for the importers, arguing against any increase in the tariff, asserted that the heavy volume of Japanese canned crab imports in the autumn of 1939 and early 1940 was caused by this Government's announcement that the American-Japanese trade treaty of 1911 would be allowed to lapse on January 26, 1940.

Uncertainty over trade relations after expiration of the treaty led importing houses to acquire large stocks of the product, both by direct import and withdrawal from bonded warehouses, he stated.

Riote contended that the Japanese crab meat has an entirely distinctive flavor and should not be regarded as competing with American crab meat. He introduced a number of statements from wholesalers and dealers showing, he said, that the Japanese trade treaty of 1911 would be allowed to lapse on January 26, 1940.

Leahy Confers With Petain For an Hour

France Gratified By Plan to Ship Milk for Children

By G. H. Archambault. Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Jan. 9.—Admiral William D. Leahy, the new American Ambassador, was received this afternoon by Marshal Petain, chief of state, for a survey of the general situation.

Yesterday the ceremony of presenting credentials had been purely formal; today the ambassador and the marshal got down to business and conferred for about one hour. The conversation took place at the Hotel du Parc, where the marshal has his office. At the same time Mrs. Leahy, who speaks French fluently, called on Mme. Petain. H. Freeman Matthews, first secretary of the embassy, served as interpreter between the admiral and the marshal.

Strict diplomatic reserve is maintained regarding the subjects discussed. Nevertheless, two were certainly mentioned—President Roosevelt's personal message to "my friend, Marshal Petain," and the shipment to France of various supplies, including milk for children.

As regards the latter, there is no indication yet that it may be published at some future time, nor is it known when the marshal will reply.

As regards the shipment of supplies, there is gratification at the news that at the personal request of President Roosevelt, the British government will permit clothing and food for French children to pass through the blockade.

In Paris, however, it would appear that certain reservations are made on this point. The Petit Parisien, for instance, warns against too high hopes and says "if American leaders—the same who supply Britain with war material—had really desired to supply us with foodstuffs, they could have done so the moment they wished." The newspaper then speaks of "playing Britain's game."

"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity"

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt expressed the hope that the French people "may soon enjoy the blessings of peace with liberty, equality and fraternity" in an exchange of New Year's greetings with Marshal Petain, French chief of state, that was made public by the State Department yesterday.

"Liberty, equality and fraternity" was the motto of the French republic, which disappeared with the advent of the present authoritarian government. Its use by the President was regarded in diplomatic circles as expressive of a hope that one day the republic will be revived.

Hatch to Offer Broader Bill On Poll Frauds

Would Make Cheating In Presidential Vote A Federal Offense

Senator Carl A. Hatch, New Mexico Democrat who authored the two "purity in politics" laws, said yesterday he planned to introduce today a bill making it a Federal crime to commit fraud in Presidential elections.

No direct legislation exists at the present time to prohibit many dishonest acts in National elections, he said.

He added that proponents of the suggested bill—which was prepared by a committee of the American Bar Association—assert that even such an act as conspiracy fraudulently to elect the President and Vice President of the United States would now violate no Federal law, nor would bribery or various vote-buying practices that may be committed in a Presidential election.

The bill, which would apply to primary as well as general elections at which National officials were to be chosen, would impose a $5,000 fine or ten years imprisonment for use of bribery or threats for miscounting of ballots, for padding election rolls, for impersonation of a voter, for voting twice, or for conspiring to violate the act.

Asserting that he intended to make a "serious effort" for passage of the bill this session, Senator Hatch indicated at the same time that he would proceed cautiously on proposed amendments to his "purity in politics" laws.

Existing legislation which apparently revealed some loopholes during the recent election may be modified in the light of final reports from the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee and grand juries investigating election activities.

Private Bank Not Under Fire

The First Federal Savings and Loan Association, a private institution, was not under fire in the way with the report of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, which reported irregularities in travel expense allowances in three Government agencies.

Warren's report, published yesterday, named the Federal Savings and Loan Association, a Federal agency under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. The name appeared in The Post as the Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Bearing Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

If you want to break all Olympic records for one backward jump just take a look at the war budget.

I haven't seen such big numbers since I inspected boxcars for the Santa Fe. Why, even Cal Smith's dressmaker has never seen figures like that.

We seem to have ordered everything in triplicate. I can't figure out the three naves. One is for the Atlantic and one for the Pacific. Maybe the third just sails around in red ink.

I see that Mrs. Roosevelt is quite indignant that the Republican Congress didn't cheer the amount of the budget. Well, those boys are on the wrong side of the decimal point like near-beer.

What I don't quite understand is why this trip is more expensive than 1917. We were in the European mess before, and the doctor usually charges less for the second visit.

The exact amount of the budget is $17,485,528,049 and I'm glad that Mr. Roosevelt is taking their word for it so we can go right to work on defense.

If Cal Coolidge were still President there would be some still delay getting to work for Cal would insist on counting his change before leaving the window.

Budget Figures Juggled, Byrd Says; Denies Nondefense Cut

Asserts Normal Appropriations Are Concealed in Broadened Defense Categories, Sees $70,000,000,000 Debt

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, contended yesterday that the Administration had resorted to "juggling" of budget figures to "cover up" increases in nondefense spending and to give the impression that expenditures of this type were being reduced to offset rising armament costs.

"It is a trick budget," he said in a statement, "to the extent that effort is made to create the impression that there is reduction in Federal nondefense spending." This impression, he asserted, resulted in part from "a juggling operation which has moved appropriations for so-called normal or nondefense expenditures into broadened budgetary defense categories."

At the same time the Virginian expressed the opinion it was "possible and probable" that direct and contingent liabilities of the Government would reach or exceed $70,000,000,000.

Following is the text in part: "A close analysis of the budget just submitted to Congress would show an increase in the normal expenses of Government."

"It is a trick budget to the extent that effort is made to create the impression that there is reduction in Federal nondefense spending. This impression appears to have been conveyed not only by the language of the budget message, which does not disclose all of the facts and details, but also by a juggling operation which has moved appropriations for so-called normal or nondefense expenditures into broadened budgetary defense categories."

"On its face, the budget shows $6,738,000,000 of so-called nondefense expenditures for the current fiscal year and an estimate of $6,874,000,000 in these items for the next fiscal year—a bookkeeping reduction of approximately $64,000,000."

"Examination, however, reveals that for 1942, $315,000,000 of what are designated as surplus assets of Government corporations has been reduced from Department of Agriculture estimates. Thus, there is a $315,000,000 discrepancy in the non-defense expenditure total."

A Bookkeeping Subterfuge

"This is clearly a subterfuge in bookkeeping, because the assets of Government corporations are created by the issuance of bonds, in not instances, which are guaranteed by the Federal Government and any recovery of such assets should be applied to the payment of the indebtedness which made possible this so-called surplus fund."

"Further analysis of the budget shows that substantial parts of the appropriations for agencies have been transferred from nondefense sections of the budget to the emergency defense budget.

"Such juggling actually covers up increases in the normal budget to the extent that items involved do not absolutely result from national defense necessity."

"It is true that there is reduction in the work relief estimates, but reduced estimates have appeared in original proposals before only to be hoisted subsequently and in supplemental deficiency bills."

"This budget, moreover, undertakes the remarkable procedure of transferring from ordinary expenditures were very low, this Government Army and Navy expenditures except those for Army engineer, and river and harbor improvement. Even in the disarmament years, when our Army and Navy expenditures were very low, this government expended for Army and Navy peacetime operations approximately $700,000,000 annually. None of this, in the 1942 budget, is defined as normal. All of it is classified as emergency defense spending."

"It is a fact to be noted that the Federal Government next year, under the new budget proposals, will spend in excess of $8,000,000,000 for so-called normal operations of government, including probable additions to come in the customary deficiency appropriation requests. This figure may be reached after including normal peace time operations of the Army and Navy, and after the deducing in the year of surplus from so-called surplus assets of Government corporations."

Defense Costs Add to Debt

"The estimated receipts, the largest in the history of the country and collected in what is already the most excessive tax burden we have ever experienced, are estimated at $8,200,000,000. It should be made clear that all the receipts, and perhaps more, will be taken to pay our normal expenditures and every dollar of national defense expenditure will be added to the public debt."

"It is to be noted further, that the budget does not include the cost of proposed financial aid to Great Britain, and no estimate on this item can be made at this time. Already appropriations and authorizations for national defense have been made and requested in excess of $28,000,000,000, and the figure probably will be greater before the current session of Congress ends."

"In view of all these, the budget estimate of the national debt at the end of the next fiscal year is nearly $60,000,000,000. Add to this probable increases in the budgeted items; add financial aid to Great Britain, and add the obligations incurred and to be incurred by 30-odd Government corporations, and it appears possible and probable that the direct debt and contingent liabilities of the United States Government at the end of the 1942 fiscal year will approach if not exceed the colossal sum of $70,000,000,000."

"Of especial interest in the President's budget message was his suggestion of abolishing the statutory debt limitation fixed by Congress. I would regard such action as dangerous and an incentive to extravagance."

$600,000,000 British Assets May Be Sold

Officials Confer On Way to Liquidate Securities in U. S.

Discussions are underway between the Treasury, the Securities and Exchange Commission and a consortium of American investment trusts looking toward purchase of up to $600,000,000 of American industrial securities from Great Britain.

The plan, now in its preliminary stage, does not call for the purchase by American trusts of small blocks of securities, but the capitalization of certain American concerns controlled by British investors.

One of the companies that might be sold is Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co., controlled by British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd. British-American acquired control in 1927.

Aggregate $700,000,000

It is estimated that the British have "sequestered" from British investors American securities that are readily marketable with an aggregate value of $700,000,000.

Last week Cyril Quinn, an official of Tri-Continental Corporation, conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. He was accompanied by Ganson Purcell, head of the trading and exchange division of the SEC. Purcell has on a number of occasions participated in discussions with Treasury officials on various proposals to dispose of American securities held by British investors.

Under the Investment Company Act of 1940, investment trusts are permitted to participate in underwritings or secondary market operations. If the plan is approved, the American investment trusts may acquire the securities held by British investors and redistribute them or hold them for investment.

Advanced By Jones

At the outbreak of the war it was reported that such a scheme had been advanced to Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator. He had said he would be willing to acquire the securities for RFC investment.

Officials said they believed a syndicate headed by Tri-Continental Corporation might be set up to handle the tremendous deal.

U. S. Takes Hand In Plane Dispute

strike was ratified by the 212 workers of the company who would have been affected. All members of the night crew, according to the United Press.

Thomas Burns, representative of Hillman, was a participant in company officials and representatives of Local No. 681 of the U. A. W. A. that preceded the postponement, the Associated Press reported.

The Ranger plant has contracts for about 2,000 engines for Army and Navy planes and another Navy contract for 400 engines pending.

The union's demands, repetition of strike, vote Monday night, included a 5-cent an hour pay increase for all employees, an increase in the starting wage from 50 to 55 cents an hour, an increase to 65 cents an hour, and a complete reclassification of all employees.

Duff, chief general manager of the plant and vice president of the parent corporation, said the plant offered to pay inexperienced men 50 cents to start, 55 cents after six months, and 65 cents after a year.

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of naval aviation, told the House Naval Committee yesterday that the "strike would be a serious blow to the defense program and that the Navy Department had been investigating the situation."

Admiral Towers had testified previously that a shortage of airplane engines would exist for another 18 months and constituted one of the most serious bottlenecks in the military and naval aircraft program.

Talk of a strike in the defense industries was heard on Capitol Hill after Towers' testimony.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, was outspoken in his criticism and expressed belief President Roosevelt's recent declaration "the sovereignty of government" would be increased by the Government if other methods failed was applicable in such situations.

In response to questions, Towers warned the committee that large expenditures for further plant expansion probably would not help in the immediate plane engine shortage because "we are facing the risk right now of running head-on into the law of diminishing returns."

Efforts at greater expansion, he said, might result in slowing down the output of engines at this point.

When Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, sought to elicit recommendations from Towers as to what the Government ought to do about strikes in defense industries, Vinson cut in to declare that the remedy was Congress' responsibility.

"I'm not going to shirk my responsibility," Vinson declared. "I'm not going to sit idly by and see this program delayed. Strikes and other things must stand aside and let this program go through."

Maas, ranking minority member, commented that soldiers, sailors and marines are court-martialed if they do not perform their duties, and asked Towers if it were not just as important for manufacturers and labor to perform theirs.

"It's more important at this moment," Towers replied.

Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, declared Congress ought to do something about the situation if "in time of peril" manufacturers and workers "haven't enough patriotism to get together."

Although Towers expressed belief the Government had no authority to prevent strikes, he said the problem was national in scope. He said the labor situation in the aircraft industry was "a delicate one throughout."

Congressional Leaders Study Plan to Lease Arms

Department committee on education, recreation and community service—new morale organization.

The high command called on the Governors of the 48 States to name committees to aid in preparation of plans for troops movements throughout the country to avoid interference with civilian traffic.

Secretary Stimson's disclosure of the consolidated Caribbean authority comes on the heels of another move strengthening hemisphere defenses—the Navy's creation of a separate Atlantic fleet, which is expected to operate extensively in Caribbean and South Atlantic waters.

The War Department chief declared the unified command was designed to "increase efficiency" on all defense operations in the area but particularly to attain unity of the air forces quickly.

Simultaneously, it was announced the Army has allocated $100,500 for additional construction at the new air base now being established at Borinquen Field, Puerto Rico.

Asked if the other island bases and that in British Guiana were to be brought under the new command, Secretary Stimson asserted this would depend on the total number of troops to be stationed in the area.

Reliance on Strength

Pressed for the strength of the three bases now under the new authority, the Army head remarked: "What's the use of telling Mr. Hitler how many men we have on those bases. He may have other means of providing soldiers with suitable educational and recreational facilities."

Members previously named are: Frederick H. Osborn, New York, chairman; Wayne Coy, Indianapolis, Assistant Administrator of the Federal Security Agency; Clarence A. Dykstra, National Selective Service director; Lieut. Col. H. F. Thompson, Personnel Division of the War Department General Staff, and Col. L. Kemper Williams, New Orleans, of the Adjutant General's Office.

The new committee will meet for the first time today (Friday).

Particular significance was attached to the formation of the Army police force—which never before would be classified as indispensable to the military and naval forces.

Airlines Warned

Admiral Towers, before the House Naval Committee, said that in considering calling Reserve pilots, the Navy had tried as far as possible to exempt those engaged in "essential" services, and conceded that if both the Army and Navy Reserve pilots all were called, it would virtually "ground" the commercial air lines and rob most of the aircraft factories of their test pilots and best engineers.

Towers said that about 400 members of the Naval Reserve were commercial fliers and that it was to be expected about half of these would be classified as indispensable to their companies, leaving some 200 who might be called.

In other moves announced yesterday the War Department completed arrangements with the Maritime Commission for conversion of the liner S. S. President McKinley as a combined troop and freight transport and allocated $8,879,989 for six large general hospitals at the following points: Atlanta, Charleston, S. C., New Orleans, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and Vancouver, Wash.

for additional Caribbean bases as well as strategic goods and payments in kind.

One provision specifies that all contracts and agreements for disposition of defense articles shall contain a clause by which the Government assisted would not, without the consent of the President, transfer possession of such articles or defense information to any other government or permit its use by any one not an officer or employee or agent of the recipient country.

Another provision empowers the Secretaries of War and Navy to purchase or otherwise acquire arms, ammunition, and implements of war produced within the jurisdiction of any other country, whenever the President regards this to be in the interests of the national defense of the United States.

In all of the authorized transactions affecting defense materials, the Secretaries of War and Navy and other department heads supervising the program are required to protect the rights of American citizens who by patents or otherwise have a stake in the articles of defense or information.

Revised Many Times

The 800-word bill, in process of preparation ever since the President outlined his lend-lease objectives to Congress on Monday, had been revised many times by legislative draftsmen at the Capitol before it was taken to the White House yesterday.

Besides Speaker Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Congressional leaders called to the White House included House Majority Leader McCormack, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, president pro tem of the Senate; Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, to which the measure will first be referred; Senator Connally, of Texas, a ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Luther Johnson, of Texas, ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

William S. Knudsen, chief of the Office of Production Management, joined the conference. Also "sitting in" were Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of Navy Knox and Secretary of Commerce Jones.

For more than an hour the President studied the bill and reviewed procedure with his leaders. Leaving the White House, Senator Barkley and Speaker Rayburn briefly reviewed details of the bill.

"You can wait till noon tomorrow," he laughed. "I'm not sure Government corporation to contract for and handle the arms loans was definitely dropped and it was decided not to tack the proposed statute on the Bloom resolution of May, 1940, authorizing manufacture in this country of armaments for sale to South American republics."

Knudsen 'Just Listening'

Knudsen on leaving the White House said he was "just listening." He said the bill "isn't my business," adding: "I'm on the material side. On legislation I'm not so hot."

Barkley said it had not yet been determined whether the bill would be referred to the Foreign Relations Committee in the Senate. It was assumed the same procedure would be followed as in the House, where Rayburn said the Foreign Affairs group definitely will have jurisdiction.

Before going to the White House, Bloom told reporters he had not seen the bill, but if it was referred to his committee he said he would be ready to start hearings Monday or Tuesday. He said in his opinion they "shouldn't" last longer than two or three days, but the committee would have to decide that.

Leaders believed the measure would meet swift approval in the House. In the Senate it appeared certain to collide with the isolationist opposition, led by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana. A group of about a dozen Senators were reported ready to debate the measure at length.

Eleven Bread Firms Indicted In Trust Probe

Grand Jury Names 33 Individuals Also In Price-Fixing Suits

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—A Federal grand jury indicted 11 baking companies, 30 officers and 3 other persons today on charges of conspiracy to fix the prices of bread and bakery products in eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, southern New Jersey and eastern Maryland.

R. McDonald Grey, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, aiding in the investigation, said the indictments were the first in a Nation-wide drive by the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice.

One of the two indictments also named C. W. Le Febvre, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Interstate Bakers' Council, and David C. Wiley, Lansdowne, Pa., member of the council's executive committee.

The second indictment also listed George Grant, of New York, advertising counsel for two Philadelphia companies.

The indictments charged that since about August 1, 1936, the firms "have been continuously engaged in wrongful and unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade and commerce in bread and bakery products in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act."

It also accused the companies of engaging in an "unlawful combination and conspiracy to limit the size and regulate the weights of loaves of bread" and "to fix... noncompetitive prices for the sale of bread."

The firms, the indictments charged, set up a code to fix a minimum discount rate on the price of bread sold to jobbers or agents for resale to retailers and consumers.

These codes, the indictment said, restrained the rights of individuals to engage freely in the marketing of bread in interstate commerce.

The 11 companies named were: Continental Baking Co., General Baking Co. and the Ward Baking Co., all of New York; Freshbake Baking Co. and Parkway Baking Co., all of Philadelphia.

Fisher Baking Co. and Dugan Bros. of New Jersey, Inc., both of Newark, N. J.; Hazleton Baking, Inc., of Binghamton, N. Y.; Huber Baking Co., of Wilmington, Del.; Capital Bakers, Inc., of Harrisburg, Pa.

Burdett S. Stryker, vice president and general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., until his retirement in 1931, died yesterday in Atlantic City after a long period of ill health. He was 72.

The funeral will be held Monday at 3 p. m. at the Washington funeral home, 1337 Tenth Street Northwest. The Rev. C. E. Hawthorne will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Promoted Rapidly
Mr. Stryker was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., November 27, 1868, son of Francis Stryker and Sarah (Fawcett) Stryker. He was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the District of Columbia, and began his long connection with the telephone company in 1897, as an apprentice in the Washington offices.

He was promoted rapidly and after serving in various capacities was made superintendent of maintenance of the company in 1902. In 1904 he accepted a position with the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania as division superintendent of plants at Philadelphia and remained there until 1908, later holding similar posts at Reading, Harrisburg and Pittsburgh.

In 1913 he was appointed general plant manager of the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania and associated companies, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Four years later in 1917 he accepted the office of general manager of the company and on January 1, 1923, was advanced to vice president in charge of operations.

Wife Survives
He leaves his wife, Laura M. Stryker, who resides at the Marine Apartments in Atlantic City, where the couple have been living the last few years; a sister, Mrs. Margaret M. Warden; two brothers, William H. Stryker, a real estate man, and Frank J. Stryker, all of Washington. The latter is president of the Columbia National Bank at 911 F Street Northwest.

Mr. Stryker, who also contributed to various phases of scientific development for the telephone company, was a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and of the Washington Board of Trade and Commerce.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and belonged to Temple Noyes Lodge, No. 32, and Almas Temple, "Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine." He was an officer of the Alexander Graham Bell Chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America. He was a member of the University Club. Formerly the Strykers resided at 4706 Seventeenth Street Northwest.

Agent Foster's Secret Service Record Belies Mild Demeanor

OLDEST ACTIVE SECRET SERVICE MAN—Thomas B. Foster (left), San Francisco Secret Service man, confers with Chief Frank J. Wilson at the Secret Service conference at the Willard Hotel. Foster will be the oldest man in the field in point of active service on January 21 when he completes 40 years of continuous service.

Native Washingtonian, Oldest Field Man in Point of Service, Joined in 1901 Is Now Supervising Agent on West Coast

A little man with a bald pate and gentle voice was the toast of the United States Secret Service last night. He is Thomas B. Foster, 63, a native Washingtonian, who on January 21 rounds out 40 years of service with the Treasury's undercover unit.

As supervising agent in San Francisco, Foster becomes the oldest field man in point of service and says he has "no idea of retiring until they throw me out."

He was born here in 1878 on G Street just two blocks from the Treasury Department where his career as a secret agent started in 1901. Between congratulatory handshakes at the Secret Service conference at the Willard Hotel yesterday, he proudly pointed out that San Francisco has one of the best records of any field branch in the country.

Foster looks about as much like the traditional idea of a sleuth as Tony Galento resembles a toe dancer—but as his associates put it yesterday: "His record speaks for itself."

Foster says he was practically born in a bottle of ink—his father was once city editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and most of his relatives were, and some still are, newspaper folk.

During his time with the Secret Service, Foster has served in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, El Paso and Dallas, Tex., Seattle and

Chaplin Got 'I Am' Books, Witness Says
Los Angeles, Jan. 9.—Frank von Derhoy, witness in the "I Am" mail fraud case, today named the Queen of the Netherlands, Comedian Charles Chaplin and Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota as among notables who had acknowledged receipt of one or more of the movement's books.

Von Derhoy, one of the nine defendants, said his chief duties were the care of books and magazines. A scrapbook of acknowledgments kept by him was introduced in evidence.

It contained a letter from the librarian of the Library of Congress expressing appreciation for a complete set of the books as "a valued addition to its collections."

Other letters were from universities, including Harvard, Pennsylvania and California.

A Government witness had testified the late Guy Ballard, founder of the movement, was a poor musician. Mrs. Nellie Edgar Smith, of San Diego, defense witness, said today he had told her he did not know one note from another.

"But he went to the piano and played like a master," she said. "Just like one inspired. The music was absolutely new to me. I had never heard anything like it."

Eugene Field, civil engineer, of Boise, Idaho, told how he had been struck of ecstatic raptures.

"I had been suffering for years and my condition began to improve shortly after I began my 'I am' studies," he testified.

Reserve Plan Blamed as U.S. Bonds Decline

Morgenthau's Criticism Indicates Fight in Congress

By George Bookman Post Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau charged yesterday that a recent two-point drop in Treasury bond prices was owing "entirely" to publication of the Federal Reserve Board's plan to curb inflation.

Presaging a fight in Congress on the Reserve Board's demands for voiding many of the President's money powers and for raising bank reserve requirements, the Treasury Secretary said the Reserve Board's plan had caused an "unwarranted" decline in Federal bond quotations on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Treasury's index of selected Government bonds has declined from $111.66 on December 30 to $109.74 on January 8. The Federal Reserve Board announced its anti-inflation plans New Year's Day.

Morgenthau told reporters at a press conference that he was not disturbed by the price decline, but said he knew of no reason for it other than the price decline at this time.

Notes May Cost U. S. More

The net result of the drop in bond prices, he said, may be that the Treasury will have to pay a somewhat higher price than usual when it sells a previously announced issue of $500,000,000 in national defense notes later this month. Plans had called for selling the issue at an interest rate of 3 1/2 per cent, the same rate as for the first issue of taxable notes, sold last month.

Morgenthau charged that the drop in bond prices this month was "artificial," saying that he knew of no reason that should cause such a sharp rise in interest rates as since January 1.

The Treasury Secretary pointed out that the rise in interest rates affects not only the Government but also any person who wants to borrow money, no matter how small the amount.

Predict Tighter Money

The Reserve Board's proposals, contained in a special report to Congress, had called among other things for "a permanent increase of reserves of banks to a maximum of 52 per cent, double the present maximum. The board contended that this would reduce excess bank reserves to about $7,000,000,000. Opponents of the plan argue that this requirement would harden interest rates, by making money tighter.

The Morgenthau statement yesterday was the latest phase of a long-standing argument between him and Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Reserve Board.

The controversy may be aired before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee which will hold hearings on fiscal policy and may look into the Reserve Board's program.

Morgenthau yesterday intimated that in his opinion the Congressional committee might not even take the Reserve Board proposals seriously enough to warrant a formal inquiry.

"That's His Business"

"If Congress takes these proposals seriously," he said of the Eccles plan, "and they have hearings, at that time I will be ready to go into the whole matter."

Asked whether he had discussed the Federal Reserve plan with President Roosevelt, Morgenthau would say only "that's his business."

White House sources indicated when the Eccles plan first appeared that they might not oppose many of its recommendations.

Questioned about Morgenthau's statement yesterday, Chairman Eccles said he had "no comment."

Yesterday following Morgenthau's press conference, Treasury bond prices, as reflected in the Treasury index, recouped to $110.21.

The Eccles plan included recommendations for these other steps: Removal of the president's power to devalue the dollar, repeal of Treasury powers to issue greenback money and to monetize foreign silver, eventual balancing of the budget, sterilization of gold imports and sale of future issues of Government securities to the public instead of banks.

Poison Death Declared Suicide
A certificate of suicide was issued last night by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an autopsy at the District Morgue yesterday disclosed Miss Hazel Crowe, 49, of 1474 Columbia Road Northwest, died of poison.

Miss Crowe died at Emergency Hospital Wednesday night after she was found unconscious in her room last Sunday. Miss Crowe, a registered nurse, had written a note to a sister, Mrs. Harry Pollack, of Baltimore, before taking the fatal dose.

Those Marx Brothers Go Both West and Insane!

Their New Picture, 'Go West,' at the Capitol,
A Roaring, Slapstick Burlesque of 'Westerns';
Collins and Peterson, on Stage, Also Crazy

THERE WAS A GREAT DEAL of laughter in the Capitol Theater at yesterday's first performance. It may have begun a little faintly, but by the time the thing was over the walls were beginning to rock a little and the dome was an extra bulge.

BELL

The screen feature is the Marx Brothers' latest—and, report has it, last—for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and bears the title of "Go West." There will be a few among us, no doubt, who will feel that that was not the wisest thing the Marx boys might have done, but a laughometer certainly would put them in their place. The stage bill, even beginning with Sam Jack Kaufman's daffy overture and Art Brown's organ-conducted songfest, is keyed to the frivolous pitch of the screen attraction—what with those perennial lunatics, Marty Collins and Harry Peterson headlining the business.

"Go West" does that in a hurry. The only preliminary to the doings out in Cripple Creek, where an honest young plainsman is trying to sell Dead Man's Gulch to the railroad, is a railroad station incident to the East, in which Harpo and Chico engineer Groucho out of all his dough in one of those elaborated gags that only the Marxes seem able to dream up. When it comes to money changing, they make the United States Treasury look pretty silly.

Once out in Cripple Creek, the crazy celluloid runs riot in a burlesque of the traditional "Western" out-frenzies even "The Trail of the Vigilantes." There is no use trying to explain how or why. It just does. The climax of all the tomfoolishness is reached in a glorified "chase" that involves a team of horses against a railroad train in a madman's race for possession of the deed to the gulch. Running out of fuel, the Messrs. J. Quentin Quale, Joe Panello and his mute brother, "Rusty," which, of course, would be the Marxian horde, burn up the train their engine is hauling. But not until it has run off the track and made itself into a merry-go-round in a cow pasture, where Harpo attempts to grab the brass ring out of the bull's nose! That will give you a vague notion of how frantic "Go West" can get.

By means that are less fantastic than most of the rest of the film, it is found possible to permit Chico to do his familiar comedy "bit," at the keyboard of a dance hall piano, and Harpo his, at the strings of a harp that appears to be a loon on which a tribe of elgar store Indians are weaving blankets. Chico's planning is beginning to wear a bit thin, but Harpo, at the instrument whose name he bears, is still an artist to his finger tips. There are a couple of songs, or three, interwoven with the action, too, and they are not bad as comic relief from the incessant comedy, if you get the idea. One is a sort of "Donkey's Serenade" travesty, in which John Carroll does most of the barytoning in a voice that does the gelatin no damage whatever.

The Marx Brothers, needless to say, are the Marx Brothers, no matter what their geographical location happens to be at the moment. The West affords them their supreme opportunity to go slapstick and they go the whole way. Groucho still is the head man in the planning of all sorts of bizarre bit deals in business, romance and general rowdiness around. Chico preserves an accent suitable to the name of Panello and Harpo remains the most expressive members of the trio by the inspired quality of his pantomime and uncanny ability to make anything but words serve as an eloquent language. Their support in this one is a matter of minor importance, since to all intents and purposes, they are the whole show.

The girls in the case are Diana Lewis, as the ingenious prairie flower, whose grandpappy holds title to the coveted land, and June MacCloy, the Lubell of the dance halls, who mingles a throaty tune almost as seductively as Marlene Dietrich. She gives the boys a few lusty moments, too. Tully Marshall, the veteran character actor seen so seldom these days, is in there momentarily as the old desert-rat who owns the important paper, villains, "Go West" has Robert Barrat, not so much in evidence these days, either, and Walter Woolf King, the wily gent trying to maneuver all the shady deals, playing both ends against the middle—his own middle, once the boys go to work on him. George Lessey is a luckless railroad president, as you will find out at the end of the picture, when Harpo goes about driving the golden spike!

The stage portion of the entertainment is not entirely Collins and Peterson, but it doesn't miss by much. The items by which it does miss are Johnny Downs, back from the films in a neat round of songs and dances; the Vase Family, making their first local appearance from the airwaves in some exceedingly tricky song arrangements; and Alice Kavan, a dancer whose tapping is tops. All these are introduced by C. and P., and then they take what amounts to permanent possession of the ramp in front of the orchestra to tear down the house with an act that never seems to grow old in Washington's affections. As for that eutery—if that is what it is—you had better see it yourself. The Marx Brothers never were any goofier.

'Jeb' Stuart Survived—but John Brown Got Away!

John Brown Marches On At the "Met"

"Santa Fe Trail"
Continues After Run
On Earle Screen

Just as "John Brown's Body" was one of the strains of the Civil War, so that zealous Abolitionist stalks through the film Warner Brothers have spun on some of the events which preceded that bloody conflict. "Santa Fe Trail" is the none-too-accurate title those expert filmmakers have given their work, which this morning moves into the Metropolitan after ten days at the Earle.

As the "Kansas Terror," Raymond Massey is outstanding in a cast which presents Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Donald Reagan, Alan Hale and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams in roles turned to order. In Massey's hands, John Brown becomes the striking, passionate figure he must have been.

There is more Civil War prelude to "Santa Fe Trail" than John Brown. The film opens in graduation week at West Point, of 1854. Secretary of War Jefferson Davis awards the diplomas, Robert E. Lee is commandant of the post, J. E. B. Stuart, George Custer, Paul Sheridan, George Fickett and Jim Longstreet are the leave-taking cadets. With such figures an unbeatable dramatic situation is drawn.

They become junior officers at Fort Leavenworth, Western outpost of the Army and in the center of the troublesome John Brown region. It is not long after that John Brown enters the story to dominate it with his fierce, frenzied determination.

With such figures and in so nascent a struggle, it is all the more a pity that Warner have been so tradition-minded as to insist on the "Railroads-to-the-West" theme, the cloyingly romantic obligato stressed for Miss de Havilland and the unoriginal, good, clean fun supplied by Massey, Hale and Williams. This timorous accompaniment to a thrilling story and a pointless title place an unnecessary burden on an otherwise sweeping and commanding tale.

This morning the Metropolitan also offers the latest newswheel and a short subject on its new bill, but as it was in the extended run at the Earle, "Santa Fe Trail" is the drawing card.

SUCCESS: Jascha Heifetz and Lawrence Tibbett went to the offices of the Theater Authority this week to confer with Alan Corelli. "Come inside," Corelli invited. "I want you to meet someone who's very interesting." Heifetz and Tibbett followed their host into the inner office and were introduced to Jim Braddock, the prize fighter. "You and Heifetz have one thing in common," Tibbett told Braddock. "He, too, has been making a living with his hands." "Yeah?" He must've been pretty good in his day," said the former heavyweight champion, appraising Heifetz. "He hasn't a single mark on him."

CARE: Claudette Colbert went to San Valley and told the ski instructor that she wanted some lessons. "But you must be careful that I don't get hurt," Miss Colbert warned, "because I'm scheduled to start my new picture as soon as I get back to Hollywood." "I'll be careful," the instructor promised, "but I remember that when you were here last you took many risks." "Then I wasn't about to start in a picture," Miss Colbert explained. "Now it's different." The ski instructor exercised great care, and the screen star returned to Hollywood without a single scratch. As soon as Miss Colbert arrived at her home she had a hot bath drawn, stepped into the tub and slipped. Now her broken leg is in a plaster cast.

ENTERPRISE: George Jessel purchased some Palm Beach property from Sam Harris last week and will build a home there. Some years ago when Harris owned a large estate in Palm Beach and another in Great Neck the doctors advised him to go to Arizona for his health. Kim Moray visited Harris while he still was ill and was told of the doctor's advice. She, therefore, purchased both his estates. Jessel also was permitted to visit the ailing producer, who told him of the property sales. When George returned to the Friars Club the members asked: "Well, how's Harris? Any better?" "He's not sick," said Jessel. "He's in the real estate business."

FAILURE: Doris Nolan was in Sardi's last night, where she was asked: "How's your show doing?" "Miss Nolan, who had appeared in "Cue for Passion," answered: "It closed last week." "But why? Was the next guy?" Doris shrugged and replied: "Malnutrition of customers."

TYRAN: Robert Marshall and Mark Hanna sat with Ernest Hemingway at the Stork Club discussing the movie production of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Marshall suggested the name of a director "who could do the job beautifully." "And Gary Cooper, of course, is perfect for the Robert Jordan role," he added. "And for Maria?" "I think Ingrid Bergman would be best," Hemingway stated. "Well, let's see," said Marshall, and discussed her possibilities as well as the characteristics of Pilar and Pablo. "Now wait a minute," Hanna interrupted. "How much of the book have you read?" "Frankly," confessed Marshall, "I haven't read it yet."

SONG: Jimmy Walker, who describes himself as "the happiest buttonhole maker in the world"—because of his new job as impartial chairman of the current industry—confided last night that he is spending his spare time writing songs. "We heard you sing a medley of your songs on election night," Walker was told. "I sing at every election night," said Jimmy, "and at certain hours—or, rather, when the hours become uncertain."

DEFENSE: The motion-picture industry will contribute to the national defense program in a setup now being formulated. The plan is for each studio to be represented on a board which will supervise joint productions of films beneficial to the program—films about our country, our defenses and the democratic way of life.

Hollywood, Jan. 9
We're really starting the New Year right. Movie industry is getting together in a big way to give a dinner for

Frank Capra to celebrate his twentieth year in the picture business. As usual, Walter Wanger was the ringleader of the movement, but it doesn't matter who started it, so long as Hollywood carries on. I hope this is just the beginning of a lot of get-togethers of like nature. They do Hollywood an awful lot of good.

Ran into Pete Smith, who makes these wonderful shorts. He said, "you know, Hedda, the shorts have been a blessing, but— I've almost had to give up going to sporting events. At my last baseball game, which I love, my favorite team had two strikes, three balls against them when Harpo Marx leaped over and said, 'Hey! How's about doing a harp picture with me?' And he meant harp—not harpy. If I'd had a baseball bat handy, he could have played the harp—but it wouldn't have been a short."

During an exciting forward pass at a football game, Grantland Rice yelled, 'Hey! Pete! I've got a swell idea. Let's bring trotting horses back!'

Well, Pete now has an idea—good, too. If he can get that mad hatter, John Fredricks, to hold still long enough, and get me for a willing victim, he'll show how those things ladies wear on their heads are born—through frenzy, fright, fear and frustration. How would you like that, huh?

I just saw one of the first pictures of "The Flame of New Orleans" set. Joe Pasternak said he's scored the town for a leading man, then signed up Bruce Cabot. Bruce is all right, but I don't think he's Dietrich caliber. However, I can be convinced. But I'll wait till the picture's finished.

Dottie Lamour, who's going to be "Caught in the Draft" with Bob Hope, is fitting 14

Super-Envoy To Americas Is Wallace's Aim

He Plans to Combine
Role With New Duties
As Vice President

Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace made it clear yesterday that he intends to combine the role of goodwill ambassador to Latin America with his new executive duties after he is sworn in January 20.

He plans to visit each of the Central and South American nations, he told an impromptu press conference in the Senate Office Building. Purpose of the visits, he said, will be to promote mutual prosperity and peace in the Western Hemisphere.

The former Secretary of Agriculture recently returned from Mexico City where he was President Roosevelt's personal representative at the inauguration of Mexican President Avila Camacho. He visited the Capitol yesterday to confer with Vice President John Nance Garner relative to plans for his own inauguration.

His plans to tour the American republics are deemed significant in view of current charges that many Latin-American agents of United States business firms are using their position to promote Axis propaganda and to foster anti-American activities. Such charges were made Wednesday by Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of cultural and commercial relations with Latin America.

Wallace told reporters he was "deeply interested in the whole question of the relationship of Latin American countries with the United States, their mutual prosperity and peace in this hemisphere."

Presumably his trips would be made during Congressional recesses. Discussing possible methods of promoting mutual prosperity among the Americas, Wallace mentioned Mexico as an example. It was hoped, he said, that the United States and Mexico could work out means of complementing each other's agricultural production. He told of efforts to increase cultivation in Mexico's lowlands where, he said, it may be possible to grow rubber, quinine and other products which this country needs.

A United States mission, he said, is studying possibility of growing rubber in several Latin-American countries, and is due in Mexico City in ten days.

Rockefeller Optimistic
New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—Nelson A. Rockefeller, coordinator of commercial and cultural relations with the American republics, told the New York State Chamber of Commerce today that trade and financial aid extended by the United States has dashed Nazi hopes of economic collapse among South American countries.

"That's what the anti-American Nazi groups have been waiting for," he told an audience which included his father, John D. Rockefeller, jr. "Once they could get a foothold through financial weakness of a Southern republic, they would block more effectively the solidarity of the 21 American republics. Preservation of the economic stability and political independence of these countries is the only way to prevent such a collapse."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots
Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 9 (INS)—There will be no divorce between Myrna Loy, the screen's perfect wife, and William

PARSONS and William Powell, her popular movie husband. Myrna and Bill will again be reunited in a comedy called "Love Crazy," an original by David Hertz and William Ludwig, the young man who wrote the first "Hardy" story. As far as I can gather "Love Crazy" is as zany as "I Love You Again," with the sort of nonsense in which Bill excels.

Myrna and Bill get all mixed up in matrimonial complications with Myrna doing her best, as usual, to straighten out the tangles. Jack Conway directs them and Pan Berman is readying the movie for M-G-M. I am glad Myrna is starting work, for I believe she will be happier.

Today was a busy day for Jack Benny, who started the new year off with two movie contracts—one with Twentieth Century-Fox and a renewal of his old deal with Paramount.

Not bad for a young man who also has a top radio show. Jack continues his association with Paramount by agreeing to do two pictures a year for three years. He has a straight deal with Twentieth, who will arrange their shooting so it won't interfere with Para.

Twentieth plans a top musical for Prof. Benny and I sincerely hope Jack will do one picture in which he plays a fictional character just like any star. Playing one's self continually has its drawback, since there is bound to be a limit to good material. "Love Thy Neighbor," however, has been cleaning up at the box-office.

A sphinx couldn't have been more silent than Hal Roach when I questioned him about negotiations that are pending with Douglas Fairbanks, jr. But I learned a deal is on for young Doug to produce on the Roach lot. I have an idea he will also act in his pictures.

Why not? His father acted and produced his own pictures, and speaking of Doug, sr., comes a letter asking why nobody ever thought of bringing "Manhattan Madness" to the screen. "As you remember," writes Mr. D., "Jimmy Quirk listed it in Photoplay as one of the greatest pictures of all times." The story is by Charles T. Dazey, of "In Old Kentucky" fame, and it would make as good a picture as "The Mark of Zorro" or "The Thief of Bagdad."

Sylvia Fairbanks, the former Lady Ashley, today made a test for the role of Vera in "A Woman's Face." She'll have the second lead to Joan Crawford, a very good part and, of course, George Cukor to direct her. Sylvia has lived on very little money since Doug Fairbanks died, simply because the estate is still tied up. She is trying so hard to be brave and to go on with life as best she can and her friends couldn't be happier, now that she is taking an interest in life.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan welcome the stork in May and you've never known two happier people. Shirley kept her secret until she finished her movie at Warners; 'tis whispered that Matty Fox, Universal executive, and Estelle Eisenberg, attractive brunette, have named the day; George McDonald, Jean Parker's ex, has enlisted in the Army in New York; Eleanor Powell and Dan Dailey, jr., who discovered each other at the Tony Martin party, are keeping the telephone busy; the Roy Rogers' little daughter, Cheryl, recently adopted, is seriously ill with the flu.

The Phil Berge and the Buster Colliers leave Saturday for ten days' hunting jaunt in Mexico; the Cobina Wrights, mother and daughter are great hostesses and know the art of entertaining their guests. After a wonderful spaghetti dinner, which Joe Poppino personally cooked, he sang for us. Cobina, sr., also entertained and as for Gracie Fields, she sang song after song, ending with "There'll Always Be an England" and what feeling she puts into those nostalgic words. Edgar Bergen, Jerry Colonna and others all did their stunts with the 75 guests sitting on chairs and on the floors and joining in the chorus.

The party honored Elizabeth Arden and her sister, Countess de Maubian. Barbara Hutton wore a beautiful moonstone necklace and bracelet set with diamonds. She told me she brought them from India in a sack and paid about $15 for the lot—the moonstones I mean. She, of course, was with Cary Grant and their devotion is no secret. Reginald Gardiner was in rare form and his account of the trip to Santa Fe, in which he and Bill Orr did the M.C.-ing is a riot. Bobby Quirk devoted himself to pretty Cobina. Just about everybody else was at the party. Mary Pickford, wearing her gorgeous sapphires, with Buddy, Mary has talked Buddy out of accepting a Broadway show because she wants him here with her.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Plans Announced For Capital's New
1,000-Room Hotel

Plans for Washington's projected 1,000-room, $8,500,000 Hotel Statler, to be opened next year on Sixteenth Street between K and L, were announced yesterday by Frank A. McKowne, president of the Statler chain.

The job of tearing down buildings now on the site, which was acquired December 23, will begin about April 1, McKowne said. Holabird & Root, of Chicago, were the architects, with A. B. Clas, of Washington, as associate.

Features will include a ballroom to accommodate 2,000 persons at dinner and 3,500 at a meeting. In addition, smaller rooms will be provided on the second floor for conventions and meetings of all sizes.

An inside driveway, through the hotel building from K to L Street, will afford entrance directly from automobiles. McKowne said, will be completely air-conditioned, winter and summer. A "Peacock Alley," to be called the "Capitol Terrace," will be built off the lobby.

21 Pass Police Test

B. Peyton Whalen, Montgomery County police commissioner, announced yesterday that 21 of the 62 candidates for the force had passed the recent physical examinations. A written examination for these candidates will be held the last of the month.

Are You Buying Beef BLINDFOLDED?

Let's get from behind this over-emphasized mask of high-sounding, glittering generalities regarding the beef you buy. Nowadays, "the air is blue" with such so-called extraordinary beef virtues as guarantees, testimonials, aging, selection, temperatures, deliveries, etc.—all of which more or less are applicable to any beef sold in the reliable stores.

Yet with all these secondary claims, that first and foremost factor of HIGH QUALITY is being PRESUMED to be present—not ASSURED such as it is when the U. S. Government places its unbiased grade stamp on beef.

An English-Speaking Union

THE OTHER DAY I got a curious telegram from a gentleman who accused me of having advocated an English-Speaking Union, and indicated that he thereby thought me a British agent. I have advocated an English-Speaking Union, and I hope to be able some time to see it mature effectively advocated, but it is not present. I anticipate opposition to it in Great Britain quite as much as in America, and I am not a British agent. My advocacy is wholly based on reason, and on a view of what seems to me to be the most likely developments in the world as a result of the war.

FIRST OF ALL, I believe that language, not race, is the primary tie between peoples. I believe that language creates a type of mind, and that the white world, at least, is not importantly divided into races, but into types and languages. Even Hitler, whose anthropological ideas are, to say the least, confused, mixes up race and language. When he says "Aryan," he actually uses a word deriving from a linguistic not a racial grouping, and when he speaks of the "union of all Germans," he means simply anyone who natively speaks the German language, except Jews. The Baltic Germans are more different racially from the Celtic Austrians of the Salzkammergut than the latter are from whole groups of Frenchmen and British Celts.

The former, the Baltic Germans and a large part of the Prussians have a strong Slavic strain, and show it in the physical type. The Czechs and the Prussians are racially very similar. The English, racially anyhow, are a mixture of Teutons and Normans and Mediterranean races.

People are the way they think, and except for mathematicians and musicians people think in words. And even musicians and mathematicians communicate with each other and with the rest of the world through words. Einstein doesn't greet his housekeeper with an equation.

The extent to which I understand the mind of Germany is not the extent to which I have German blood. It is the extent to which I understand the difference between "ethne" and "honore." I do not know why my correspondent, who, I gather, belongs to America First, or some other isolationist group, should think me an unpatriotic American to dream of a union one fine day of the whole English-speaking world. For it is crystal clear which organization of men would dominate it. Its center would be here, in the spot of greatest military and economic power.

Of the 200,000,000 English-speaking people of the world nearly three-fourths of them live in North America today. Hitler wants to take the British empire, carve it to bits, throw the neck and wings around to his satellites and keep the breast and girdle for himself. Why not decide to keep the English-speaking world together in some sort of free federation? What's reasonable about such an idea? It is Hitler's policy, the only policy in the world allowed to dream dreams and see visions?

AS LONG AS a language lasts, a people lasts, and the endurance of language is one of the most fascinating phenomena of this world. One hundred and fifty years of partition and oppression could not obliterate the Polish language. Mussolini sent German school-teachers to the Lipari Islands for teaching Tyrolean children the German A B C's—does anyone remember this, any more? But when he and Hitler got together and Mussolini decided to let the Germans—Germans because they spoke German; there wasn't any other test—be "repatriated" to Germany, although they had lived for countless generations in the same mountains—the children all spoke German as their "mother tongue." The Italian was just school language.

When we wish to indicate that we get on well with anyone, we say, "He speaks my language." The emotional content of the mind of a people, as well as the intellectual, is molded by the words they hear as children. "Über alle Gipfel" (at the top), or "A las tres chere," is a free belief to not involve in the average American as much emotion as even "Twinkle, twinkle little star." And it is not the fault of the Germans that Mr. Werner Krauss, reciting the most moving lines of Schiller, cannot awaken the feeling among us that Mr. Evans can invoke with "This happy breed of men; this little world."

IT ISN'T a British plot, though the gentleman who telegraphed me seems to think so. The Brit-

Railroads Ready to Aid In Defense, Buford Says

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—President Roosevelt's call for greater national defense effort finds the railroads ready to do their part. Charles H. Buford, Washington, D. C., declared today at the annual meeting of the Midwest Shippers Advisory Board.

Buford, vice president of the operations and maintenance department of the Association of American Railroads, said that the railroads were equipped to handle the present volume of business and would be prepared for any increase in traffic that might develop.

'Godspeed To Halifax'

Churchill's Text

By the Associated Press
London, Jan. 9.—The text of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's address to the Pilgrims, follows:

It is no exaggeration to say that the future of the whole world and the hopes of a broadening civilization founded upon Christian ethics, depend upon the relations between the British Empire or Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America.

The identity of purpose and persistence of resolve prevailing throughout the English speaking world will, more than any other single fact, determine the way of life which will be open to generations, and perhaps to centuries, which follow our own.

In cooperation between the United States and the British Empire in the task of extirpating the spirit and regime of totalitarian intolerance, wherever it may be found, were to fail, the British Empire, rugged and embattled, might indeed hew its way through and preserve its life and strength for the inevitable renewal of the conflict on worse terms after an uneasy truce.

But the chance of setting the march of mankind clearly and surely along the high roads of human progress would be lost and might never return.

THESE we stand, all of us, upon the watch towers of history and have offered to us the glorious opportunity of making the supreme sacrifices and exertions needed by a cause which it may not be irreverent to call sublime. I have always taken the view that the fortunes of mankind in its tremendous journey are principally decided for good or for ill, but mainly for good, for the path is upward—by its greatest men and its greatest epochs.

I therefore, hail it as a most fortunate occurrence that at this war-stricken climate in world affairs there should stand at the head of the American Republic a famous statesman, long revered and experienced in the work of government, in whose heart there burns the fire of resistance to aggression and oppression, and whose sympathies and nature are drawn to the side of the undoubted champion of justice and of freedom and of the victims of wrongdoing wherever they may dwell.

And now less do I rejoice that this preeminent figure should newly have received the unprecedented honor of being called for the third time to lead the American democracies.

HIS Majesty's government had placed in Washington an Ambassador, Lord Lothian, whose character and abilities gained him the trust and friendship of President Roosevelt. Suddenly, Lothian was struck down by death.

A link was broken, a gap was opened, and a loss of the highest consequence was sustained at a very grave moment for the British and American peoples and for the causes which they have in their different ways espoused.

We, therefore, thought it our duty to restore this link, to fill this gap, to repair this loss by sending without regard to the derangement of our forces and circle here, the best man we could find, without regard to any other consideration whatsoever.

We chose our foreign secretary, who had himself chosen Lord Lothian, to fill Lord Lothian's place. Our choice was most agreeable to the President and it commands the full confidence of those in this country who mean to persevere in our righteous cause until its certain victorious end is reached.

IN Edward Halifax we have a man of light and learning, whose company is a treat, and whose friendship it is an honor to enjoy. I have often disagreed with him in the 20 years I have known him but I have always respected him and his actions because I know that courage and fidelity are the essence of his being, and that whether as soldier with his regiment in the last war or as the ruler of 400,000,000 in India he has never swerved from the path of duty as he saw it shining out before him.

As a man of deep but unparaded and unaffected religious convictions and as for many years an ardent lover of the chase he has known how to get the best out of both worlds.

Like all members of the present national government in Great Britain he has vowed himself to prosecute this war against Nazi tyranny at whatever cost until its last vestiges are destroyed.

WE send to the United States an envoy who comes from the very center of our councils and knows all our secrets. Although Halifax is serving as ambassador out of this country he cannot be a member of the war cabinet, he will be, if I may borrow a military term not inappropriate to the times in which we live, as it were, seconded from it.

He still attends all our meetings and will continue to do so during the weeks before his departure and should be able to return here for consultation at any time in the summer as I hope may be possible. He will resume his full functions and responsibilities as a minister of the crown. We now bid him and his brilliant and devoted wife Godspeed and all good fortune, and it is our fervent hope that he may prosper in a mission as momentous as any that the monarchy has entrusted to an Englishman in the lifetime of the oldest of us here.

The New Budget

By Ernest K. Lindley

Back Into Big Figures

THE FEDERAL BUDGET is getting back into big figures. Back into them, that is, for the first time since the first World War.

For the next fiscal year the President estimates 17.5 billion dollars in outgo and 9.2 billion in deficit. In the fiscal year 1919 we spent 15.5 billion and ran a deficit of 13.4.

Still to come are more billions to pay for arms for the British and other anti-Axis nations. The President's loan-lease plan could set up financially in several different ways. But in the end it probably will show up in the budget. And the cost for the next fiscal year may run anywhere from 3 to 6 billion dollars.

Still to come also are supplemental requests for civilian training for national defense, a larger youth program, and possibly some expansion of social security. By the time everything is added in, the total outgo may exceed that of 1919. It will be high enough, anyway it is figured, to make the earlier Roosevelt budgets modest.

The first thing that stands out in comparing the new budget with the financial record of 1919 is that the Federal Treasury is taking in more in taxes than it did during the World War. In 1919 it collected 5.5 billion dollars, and in 1920, 6.7 billion. The President estimates it will take in 7.6 this fiscal year and 8.3 billion the next. These are exclusive of most of the social security pay roll taxes, which are turned over to trust funds.

THE PRESIDENT believes that taxation should be still further increased. But he is still trying to balance the budget next year. Indeed, the budget could not be balanced, even theoretically, by any taxes that Congress would attempt to impose. The taxes required would be so drastic that they would disrupt our economic system.

The President is set firmly against a general sales tax or any other tax which would restrict consumption generally, and so prevent or hold back full economic recovery. Consumers may have to postpone buying specific articles temporarily so that national defense needs can be filled. But there is no need to cut down living standards as a whole.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

On Partisanship

MRS. ROOSEVELT apparently went straight home from the Capitol after the President's message to Congress and wrote that she had been not only astonished but saddened to notice that the applause came almost entirely from the Democrats and that only a few noticeable exceptions on the Republican side raised a hand in approval at any point. She said it looked to her as though those Republicans were saying to the country: "We represent you here in Congress not as citizens of the United States in a period of great crisis but as members of a political party which seeks primarily to promote its own partisan interest."

"This," Mrs. Roosevelt added, "is to me shocking and terrifying."

And I will just add at this point that Mrs. Roosevelt's remarks here cited are, to me, shocking, and, although not terrifying, certainly disturbing, because, say what you will, Mrs. Roosevelt is not a private citizen and, in a way that we all understand, speaks for the Presidency of the United States.

SO HERE we find her tossing off on the spur of the moment to catch a syndicate deadline a bad accusation against those members of the legislative branch of the United States Government who refused to indicate approval of a speech which certainly was not one of President Roosevelt's best and which would commit the people of this country to a feat of world-saving that is far beyond their voluntary intention and their ability.

The President had delivered a good speech on practically the same subject only a few days before, and in this message to Congress and, of course, to the Nation and the world, he was warning it over, which, as every comic columnist knows, is hard to do well. He is only human, he has carried an enormous load for eight years, much of it unnecessary weight which he deliberately picked up in the shape of personal, political and class controversy, and this twice-told tale had been tapped out amid the worries and distractions of an appalling responsibility.

YOU CAN'T tell me he felt that this speech clicked. I know the signs. It was a head-weary presentation of an idea that deserved his very best treatment, and the speech itself was more to be regretted than the attitude of those who shocked Mrs. Roosevelt by their failure to applaud.

On Mrs. Roosevelt's behalf I would say that the topic which she selected for her little daily column of journalism was one which a person in her position should have avoided or carefully deferred for more deliberate and thoughtful treatment. The piece was very little different from a state paper, if it wasn't actually a state paper, and it is thinkable that more people were shocked by her impulsive, public denunciation of a considerable portion of Congress and her imputation of base political motives than by the division of sentiment in Congress. This unconvictionality of Mrs. Roosevelt's may be picturesque and harmless in personal appearances in coal mines and conventions of precocious professional youth, but it gets serious when she blurs into print with serious charges or insinuations against a section of Congress—in fact, against Congress as a whole body.

IT WOULD BE just as fair to charge that the Democrats in applauding the President were selling their country into another World War for their promotion, pay and party patronage, and certainly in the years of the New Deal, the Administration members have taught the people to suspect them of partisanship in many matters. But in so serious a matter as this and in so grave a time this accusation was not heard.

The opposition in Congress and in the press had too great a sense of responsibility, but the distasteful side of the Presidency impulsively rejected the possibility that good men could disagree from decent patriotic motives. In this instance Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been famous for her tact in journalism, has given us a high political impersonation of the pitcher's wife who saw her poppy lose a tough one and, as her contribution to unity and co-operation in the ball club, turned on Mrs. Shortstop and told her what she thought of that lousy infield.

The Problem Of German Strategy

AT A CONFERENCE attended by foreign correspondents in Berlin yesterday, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels took occasion to deny that German policy was suffering from indecision. "The present pause," he said, "is creative and only apparent" for German offensives are always preceded by "intervals of the most careful preparation." And the propaganda minister recalled to his listeners that the lull in operations during the winter of 1939-40 was followed by a great offensive which, "in the shortest time imaginable, brought France to her knees."

In part, this statement may be discounted as wishful thinking; in part as an attempt to apply once more the now-familiar strategy of terror. Yet what Dr. Goebbels said cannot altogether be dismissed. His reminder of what happened a year ago certainly has real pertinence.

IN THE SIX MONTHS that have elapsed since the fall of France, Germany has failed to carry out her threat to invade England. While her aerial assault on the British Isles has broken on the rock of British resistance, Nor has Hitler found it feasible to resort to the alternative strategy of a drive to the Near East. In the meantime all manner of obstacles have arisen to impede Hitler's attempt to create a "new order" in Europe.

But Germany has not been standing still. Despite the raids carried out by the R. A. F., her high level. She has commandeered "the resources of all the conquered nations to supplement her own. She has made effective use of western Europe as an airbase and the long coastline from Norway to Spain to carry out punishing raids on a multitude of British cities and play havoc with British shipping. And there cannot be the slightest doubt that the German high command is proceeding with the same meticulous attention to detail to prepare for the inevitable showdown with Great Britain as it did for the campaigns in Poland, the Low Countries and France.

YET IN ONE very important particular the parallel which Dr. Goebbels suggested between last winter and this no longer obtains. A year ago the initiative rested entirely with Hitler. He could move in almost any direction with impunity; the Allies could only act on the basis of the Fuehrer's decision, or, except along the Franco-German frontier, a ring of neutral nations separated the combatants. Thus it was that Germany could hurl her strength at us on one point, while the Allies had to take into account and plan to meet all the various possibilities of a German offensive. And these plans were necessarily imperfect because of the unwillingness of the neutral nations to make joint military defense preparations among themselves and with the Allies.

THE SITUATION now is vastly different. Hitler is no longer master of events but finds himself forced to an increasing degree to adjust his plans and policies to circumstances created by his enemies. He no longer has even the choice between a frontal assault on Great Britain and a roundabout attack on that nation via the Balkans, Mediterranean and the Near East.

Italy's disastrous failure in Africa has broken one of the blades of the military shears with which the Axis hoped to cut the British lifeline in the Mediterranean. An overland German drive toward Iraq and the Suez Canal would be a suicidal venture at this time. A German drive across Bulgaria and Greece could now only have for its purpose the rescue of the hard-pressed Black-shirts in Albania and even if successful its value would be negative. An attack on Gibraltar would, under present circumstances, have only a long-range value.

In the meantime Italy is hurtling toward collapse, the independent Balkan states are showing an increasing measure of resistance to Hitler's demands that they become satellites of the Axis and the United States is becoming an increasingly important factor in the war as the "arsenal of democracy."

BECAUSE of these facts it is no longer a question of the direction in which Hitler will move but a question of when circumstances will compel him to embark on that all-out attack on Great Britain without which he cannot now win the war. To wait too long would be fatal to the Third Reich. With the passage of time, American production is certain to tilt the scales heavily in favor of Great Britain, while Italy becomes more and more a drag on the far from unlimited resources of the Axis.

Neither the British nor we can afford to be complacent about the situation. Hitler is no respecter of lives. Faced by the prospect of being cornered, like a rat in a trap, he and his fellow desperados may risk everything on one last throw of the dice. And there is not much time for Great Britain, with our help, to prepare for the assault that now seems inevitable and cannot be too long delayed.

Bugler Doesn't Blow at Selfridge Field

Selfridge Field, Mich., Jan. 9.—"Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," famous World War I song, has long been a soldier's favorite, particularly those references to the bugler predicting that "someday they're going to find him dead."

Selfridge Field's bugler isn't dead, but he's out of a job. Soldiers roll out and fall in for duty these wintry mornings to phonograph recordings of the familiar bugle calls played by Private George Becker, Second Communications Squadron, from the Selfridge Field control tower.

Corpl. Charles Floyd, Headquarters Squadron, Base Group, stands dejectedly by, a victim of machine-age efficiency. "The guy who gets the bugler up" doesn't bestir himself until 6:25 a. m. during the winter schedule at Selfridge Field, when "first call" is sounded. Reveille rolls from the post's loudspeakers five minutes later.

Bachelor Spills Beans On How to Bake Them

J. Joseph Donohue, Who Cooks
With the Greatest of Ease, Describes The Proper New England Method

By Martha Elynn
The Post Food Editor

BACHELORS usually leave the use of the sizzling platters and the bean pots to the restaurants. And most men can't broil a steak or bake a pot of beans without making a great to-do and leaving a messy trail behind them in the kitchen.

Perhaps it is because men cook less often than women that when they do go about making a meal it is with the manner of a pharmacist—precise, intricate, and complicated. But there are exceptions. J. Joseph Donohue, a well-known bachelor and attorney, has a pre-arranged desire for good food—especially the New England dishes which he makes himself without undue fuss and bother.

Although "Jiggs" as he is known to his friends—may be an exception in the great world of cooking rather than in a hurry, yet he does have one thing in common with the average man—the desire for simple, homely dishes rather than fancy involved ones.

It's New England Touch
Boston Baked Beans as "Jiggs" cooks them definitely reflect the touch of the New England master cooks. This is because of his New England heritage, no doubt, as he is a native of Lynn, Mass.

But if "Jiggs" serves baked beans he does not do so on the spur of the moment because he puts them to soak on Friday night, in the traditional Boston manner, and bakes them for Saturday night dinner.

Mr. Donohue says that Fanny Farmer's Cook Book is his "cookery bible." "If a man can't cook a good meal after consulting Fanny Farmer and following her directions I think he should turn his ambitions into other channels," answered "Jiggs" when I asked him where he got his recipes.

Women of Washington who would like to know the foods that please bachelors may be interested to know of this bachelor's special dishes. Number one on Mr. Donohue's list of culinary achievements is Boston baked beans.

Here's How
Here are the directions by which Mr. Donohue makes his masterpiece:

Boston Baked Beans—Soak 1 quart of small size pea-beans overnight in cold water. Pour off water in the morning and cover again with water. Bring to a boil. Pour off water and put beans in an earthenware pot.

Place ½ pound of salt pork—scored but not cut through—on top of beans. Fill pot with water. Cover the bean pot. Cook 8 hours in a slow oven, 325 degrees. For the last hour of the baking remove the cover, raise the temperature to 425 degrees and let the pork brown. During the cooking keep the pot filled with water by adding boiling water as needed.

No seasoning or spices are used, although occasionally ¼ cup of molasses may be added. Sufficient seasoning is given by the use of the salt pork.

Here is the menu that Mr. Donohue serves when he has baked beans:

Buffet Supper Menu

Vegetable Juice Cocktail
Boston Baked Beans Baked Ham
Brown Bread Celery Olives
Tossed Green Salad
Roquefort Dressing

Lemon Chiffon Tarts Coffee
Mr. Donohue does not bake the ham, brown bread or tarts. He does buy a prebaked ham and heat it in the oven, make the salad and salad dressing and brew the coffee.

To make the salad Mr. Donohue says he uses shredded lettuce, tomato quarters, radishes, cucumbers, celery, onions and carrots, and serves it dressed with Roquefort dressing, made according to the following directions:

Roquefort Dressing—Mix ¼ teaspoon salt 1 teaspoon sugar and ¼ teaspoon paprika together. Add ¼ cup vinegar and ¼ cup olive oil slowly and beat thoroughly. Add 6 tablespoons crumbled Roquefort cheese and mix thoroughly.

For those persons who may be interested in using Mr. Donohue's suggestion for lemon chiffon tarts, here is a recipe from the kitchens of the Sunbelt Kitchen.

Lemon Chiffon Tarts—Cook in a double boiler until of custard consistency ½ cup lemon juice, ½ cup sugar, 1 egg yolk and 4 beaten egg whites. Add to this mixture 1 tablespoon (envelope) gelatin, soaked in ¼ cup cold water. Stir until dissolved. Add 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel. Cook when mixture begins to thicken fold in 4 stiffly beaten egg whites with ½ cup sugar. Fill baked tart shells and chill. Just before serving spread over the tarts a topping made by soaking 12 marshmallows in cup whipping cream. Whip until stiff. Place on top. Serve cold. Tarts also may be topped with plain sweetened whipped cream.

Pies Get On Vitamin Bandwagon Pumpkin and Mince 'Protective'

IT'S fine news when we hear that foods like mince and pumpkin pie are good for us. Here's a cheerful note for pie-lovers. The season's two favorite pies—pumpkin and mince—are actually in the class of "protective foods" meaning that they are rich in vitamins and minerals.

Pumpkin pie is a splendid source of vitamin A for it contains important minerals such as calcium and iron. Mince meat is an even richer source of minerals while outstanding in mince pie is vitamin B1 or thiamin.

Luckily, pumpkin and mince are no longer limited to the holidays, so with the knowledge that they are listed among the "protective foods" it gives added pleasure when eating them.

Pumpkin chiffon pie made with a crumb crust is a dessert that takes the honors of the day. Make it by this recipe:

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie—Combine 1½ cups cooked or canned pumpkin with 3 well-beaten egg yolks, 1½ cups milk, 2-3 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg and ¼ teaspoon salt and blend. Fold in 3 egg whites that have been beaten stiff. Pour into unbaked breadcrumb crust and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, until filling is set about 1 hour.

Breadcrumb Crust—Cream ¼ cup shortening and 1 tablespoon sugar together and rub into 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs. Blend thoroughly. Pat mixture firmly against the bottom and sides of a well-greased 8-inch pie plate.

Mince meat pie can be made in a new manner, too. Try making it with apple crumb. Here is a reliable recipe from one of the great commercial kitchens.

Mince Meat and Apple Crumb Pie—Line a 9-inch pie pan with pastry. Over bottom of pastry, spread 1 medium (1 pound) tin of far of mince meat. Combine 2 cups sliced apples with approximately 1-3 cup sugar (depending on the apples used). Combine ¼ cup sifted all-purpose flour with 1-3 cup sugar. Work in 4 tablespoons butter, well chilled. Sprinkle crumb mixture over apples. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature and continue baking in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 30 minutes. Serve warm.

Service for Soup

Soups according to their type are served in cups known as cream soup cups or bouillon cups. A cream soup cup is a low, broad cup, handled on both sides. Its width is from 4½ to 5 inches and the depth about 3 inches. It is used for serving of purées, bisques, cream soups, and is extremely popular for luncheons. A bouillon cup is a tall cup with two handles. Clear soups, consommés, and bouillions are served in it.

Nippy Days Bring Pork Season; Rules for Cooking Are Given

With crisp cold days and the need of meat in the daily diet, pork, because of its high vitamin B1 content, comes into its own. Pork is at its best cooked slowly under a low fire and among the best utensils to use are copper clad stainless steel ware.

For top of stove roasting you have the copper clad Dutch Oven; the skillet does a perfect job of broiling; and for baking the stainless steel casserole, which forms the top of the copper clad double boiler. Copper conducts heat fast and evenly and requires the minimum of flame under the utensil. Then too with copper bottom utensils you are doubly assured of evenly cooked meats and no burnt spots.

Pork Chop Casserole

Season 4 loin or shoulder pork chops with salt and pepper; dredge in flour, brown in 2 tablespoons fat and place in greased casserole. Wash 2-3 cup rice. Cook 10 minutes in 2 cups boiling water. Only 2 cup are necessary, but the flame must be kept as low as possible. This method of cooking rice insures fluffy grains instead of the sodden mass you ordinarily get when you use a great deal of water. Place green pepper ring and 1 onion slice on each chop. Place spoonful of rice on each chop and pour over all 1½ cups canned tomatoes. Cover tightly with stainless steel cover. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 1 hour.

This is a dish that goes well with Lancaster potatoes made as follows:

LANCASTER POTATOES—Four medium-sized potatoes, boil in salted water (about 1 cup of water) until tender. Drain. Shake over low heat until thoroughly dry, then mash. Be sure to use a very low flame. Measure 2½ cups mashed potatoes, season with salt and pepper; add sufficient hot milk to whip light. Heap in greased casserole. Whip ½ cup heavy cream, add 6 tablespoons grated spreading cheese, blend thoroughly, spread over potatoes and bake in moderate oven 15 minutes, or until lightly browned.

Helpful Hints For the Kitchen

After peeling bananas, dip in lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Potatoes may be dropped into a bowl of milk to prevent darkening after peeling.

To peel oranges or grapefruit and free fruit entirely from the membranous or white pulp underneath skin, first place fruit in hot water for 5 minutes. You will then be able to peel every particle of outside from the fruit pulp.

A rubber plate scraper from the ten cent store efficiently cleans out every speck of batter from a bowl when transferring a mixture to a baking or serving dish.

Latin America Influences Decoration

By Elizabeth McRea Boykin
OUR GOOD neighbors in the Pan-American countries are stepping into the gap the European war has made in the stream of stimulating imports we like to get from foreign lands.

And very fresh and vibrant these seem to a taste seasoned on the old classic restraints of French and English decoration, on the intricately civilized decorative vernacular of the Orient.

For remember, Mexico and Peru have a culture older than ours, one based on fabulous riches and a tradition of exploitation and grandeur, and so days past have seen eras of elegance that have left antiques of interesting individuality.

The Mexican Accent

Don't visualize a repertoire of tinware, painted gourds and serapes when we speak of Mexican arts and crafts. The things that are making an impression in the decorating world at this time are the antiques of the Spanish era, including Spanish Chippendale furniture; elaborate pieces of the Empress Carlotta period; fine old candelabra of copper and crystal; intricately carved rocco pieces interpreting European designs with Mexican accent.

Along with these old and fine types of antiques which are affecting the current decorating scene, there is a great deal of Mexican modern furniture based on Mexican materials such as prima vera wood, woven, leather-slung seats and interesting textural fabrics of native wool.

Along with these, there is peasant furniture with a different feeling than we have been seeing.

Black Is Black Lacquer

Much of it is the native black lacquer with bright-pinked flowers, not all old, not all even authentically according to tradition, but all of it interpretive of the brilliant decorating vernacular of the country below the Rio Grande.

From Peru the decorating inspiration turns to the Spanish era and to the Inca period, both replete with inspiring ideas for reproductions and adaptations. For it is decidedly different from anything we have been getting from Europe. The Spanish heritage in Peru has its own particular flavor, dictated by the colonial impositions and by all the other forces that converged in the rich tapestry of Lima heritage.

WPA to Drop 600,000 Under Budget Cut

Rolls to Be Pared
Beginning in March,
Hunter Discloses

A cut of about one-third in the President's 1942 budget for WPA funds will mean that WPA rolls next year will be reduced to an average of 1,300,000 persons, Howard O. Hunter, Acting Work Projects Commissioner, said yesterday.

Noting that the new budget calls for $975,000,000 for WPA, while the relief agency is spending that sum in the first eight months of this year and will ask Congress for $400,000,000 for the balance of the year, Hunter said the rolls would have to be cut beginning in March.

Now employing an average of about 1,900,000, WPA will reduce its rolls to 1,500,000 by June 30 and in the fiscal year that follows will employ an average of only 1,300,000, he said.

The 600,000 persons dropped from the rolls will be partly absorbed by increased national defense activity, Hunter said. Estimating that defense activity will create 2,000,000 new jobs this year in private industry, he said that about 400,000 persons probably would be taken from WPA rolls to fill these jobs.

With regard to the 200,000 persons left without private or WPA jobs, Hunter said he did not believe the new budget would "cause any more hardship than there has been in the past."

There is a waiting list for WPA jobs that now totals 1,000,000 applicants, he added.

He said the greatest need for WPA help is in the three tiers of States that cover the Midwest, running south from Montana, North Dakota and Minnesota.

Hunter pointed out in this connection that 80 per cent of National defense contracts have been let in the seaboard States, which account for only 20 per cent of WPA jobs.

The WPA chief also predicted a rise in WPA wages and costs. The average wage is now $55 a month and average costs are $84.50 a month per man, he said.

More than 400,000 persons on WPA are now on national defense projects, Hunter said, and he expects this number to rise to 600,000 by May 1.

Quayle Tells Of $275,000 Election Loan

Senate Group Hears
Reynolds Lent Funds To Aid Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

A Senate committee received a detailed account yesterday of how R. J. Reynolds, member of the wealthy tobacco family and new Democratic national treasurer, lent $275,000 to finance radio time for President Roosevelt during the campaign.

Oliver A. Quayle, general manager and until recently treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, testified before the Senate group investigating campaign expenditures that he made a telephone appeal to Reynolds who promptly produced the funds needed to prevent cancellation of final pre-election broadcasts by the President and his supporters.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, immediately charged that Reynolds' loans to Democratic State committees in New York and New Jersey were schemes to "circumvent terms of the Hatch Act" which he said limited an individual's contribution to $5,000 and the total outlay of a national political organization to $3,000,000.

Quayle heatedly denied both charges and said that these Hatch Act limitations expressly exempted operations of State committees.

Heated Exchange

"The Hatch Act limits contributions to $5,000 and a loan is a contribution, isn't it?" Tobey shouted. "I don't know," Quayle answered. "What do you think?" Tobey boomed.

"I don't think," Quayle snapped. "That's a stupid answer," Tobey countered. "You're the manager of a great national political organization and we want to know what you think."

Quayle explained that in the final days before the November election he feared that National Democratic outlays would go over the $3,000,000 limitation and so appealed first to New York and then to New Jersey State party groups to pay costs of final radio appeals.

Just what did you say to Mr. Reynolds, your good angel, to get him to come across?" Tobey asked.

Wanted to Help Out

"I called Dick on the telephone and said we had a problem," Quayle related. "There were a lot of commitments and disbursements in the last five or six days of the campaign and I explained that the State committees could handle the broadcasts if we could borrow the money, something to assure the reelection of President and would like to help out."

Chairman Gillette, of Iowa, said these other loans were among those reported to the committee.

$398,845 reported by the New York State Democratic Committee; $105,000 reported by the Democratic National Committee; $175,000 reported by the Pennsylvania Republican State Committee, and $45,000 reported by the United Republican Finance Committee of New York.

Gillette said that the Pennsylvania Republican loans were: $70,500 due J. N. Pew, Jr., in a series made in 1937 and 1938; $100,000 due the National Bank since 1938, and $4,500 due James F. Torrance.

Union Investigates Sewer Job Where Two Were Killed

Officials of the Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Laborers Union yesterday interviewed workers employed on the Rock Creek diversion sewer project for first-hand accounts of working conditions in the sewer tunnel where two men have been killed in the last month in rockslide accidents.

From suggestions made by the workers and from other studies, union officials said a statement of safety precautions would be compiled and presented to the construction company Monday, with recommendations for adoption.

As a result of the accidents the union has demanded establishment of a District Labor Department with power to enforce standard safety regulations.

Methodist Church Marks Its 112th Year at Dinner

An equinoctial storm that ripped down the steeple and wrecked the former office of the First Methodist Church at Fifth Street and Virginia Avenue Southeast in 1896 was recalled at last night's 112th anniversary dinner by Mrs. Jessie Gates, member for 64 of her 79 years.

"Fortunately, because it happened at 3 o'clock in the morning, no one was injured," she said. However, the congregation had to find new quarters at 518 Fourth Street Southeast, the present site, she added.

Mrs. Gates has the distinction of being a charter member of both the Women's Missionary Society of First Church and also of its successor, the Woman's Society of Christian Service. Her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Campbell, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Margaret Steele, who sat with her at the dinner, both are active in women's work.

The Rev. A. F. T. Raum, First Church pastor, presided over the dinner and read excerpts from recently uncovered historical records of the congregation. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor of the Fifteenth Street Christian Church, was principal speaker.

Stadium Bills Introduced Again

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday re-introduced bills providing for the construction of a national stadium and recreational center in Washington and for the modernization of the District Small Loan Act.

The recreation center, which would include swimming pools and a parade field, would be financed by the issuance of $6,000,000 in bonds through a corporation set up to operate it. The measure provides for the sale of the bonds to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

(From The Truthtown Torch)

A "Ski in America" movement is being organized by Buzzie Bellweather, son of Truthtown's leading flowerer. Assisting him are J. Musgrave, Muscote, Mrs. Featherston Daubler, and other local notables.

The movement is a patriotic one, Buzzie explained yesterday. "Entirely too many people are going to Canada to ski," he said. "We have as good places to ski as any country in the world and Americans should stay home where they belong."

Mrs. Daubler, who is secretary of the "Ski in America" organization, said she would announce a list of patronesses soon.

"We have some perfectly wonderful names," she said. "Ultra-conservative women and men who have never before permitted their names to be used in behalf of public movements are lining up with us. However, we do not intend this to be an exclusive organization by any means. We hope to enlist the masses in our movement, particularly as we shall need a great many workers to circulate petitions, make telephone calls, send telegrams to Congress, do house to house canvassing, etc."

For Sweet Charity

Never have such brilliant jewels and lavish furs and fabrics been displayed in Truthtown as at the annual Emerald and Champagne Charity Ball held last night at the Hotel Swank.

Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger, chairman of arrangements, wore a simple red velvet gown set off with an ermine stole. She wore her diamond dog collar, a simple rope of pearls, and a pair of white gloves, and a huge corsage of white orchids.

Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope wore a simple gold sequin creation by Bragadocio, her only accessories being her emerald necklace and bracelets, several strands of perfectly matched pearls and her white fox cape.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln DePeyer was in simple silver lame and her famous diamond tiara. She wore a diamond necklace with matching bracelets and carried a huge emerald muff on which was pinned a single giant orchid.

Mrs. Hawksberry Weathercock stepped out of her Bolle-Royce in her evening dress of Hudson Bay sable, which was worn over a simple white brocade trimmed with Foutie de Paris lace and accented with several ropes of pearls and a diamond-studded brooch on her bosom.

Proceeds of the ball this year will go to the Alley Dwelling Children's Shoe Fund.

The Cocktail Crowd

Mrs. Pierrepont Preen will give a cocktail party tomorrow for Count Antipapio who is doing a Surrealist portrait of her.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Mixwell will entertain at cocktails today several famous war refugees. Among them are Pierre Poize, the famous playwright and epicure; Franz Tyrol, the novelist; Boris Samovarovitch Vodka, the pianist; Soupcon, the famous chef; Maurice, the noted hair stylist; and Mme. Seance, the world famous crystal gazer.

Toole Brothers will entertain at cocktails tomorrow afternoon at the Hotel Swank in honor of Sylvia Sylph who was awarded first place in the latest Hollywood complete girl contest.

Salem & Salem will give a cocktail party Monday to celebrate the opening of their new infants' wear department.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Motherless Girl, 14, Laments Aunt's Opposition To Her Wish to Study Music and French, as Her French-Born, Musically Gifted Mother Had Planned

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 14, very much interested in music. Before mother died, she said she hoped I could have voice lessons. She gave up a singing career to marry my father, and shortly before her untimely death, 18 months ago, she had started to teach me herself. Once this past year, I asked my father if he could afford to give me voice lessons. He said it would be possible, in a few months.

A few weeks later, we moved to my aunt's house. When father told her about his plan to give me voice lessons, she said it would be a waste of money, whereupon he dropped the idea. I was broken hearted but I didn't say anything. But my music teacher says it would be a wonderful thing if I could have voice lessons. Several voice teachers who have heard me sing at various entertainments have said the same.

But my father will not do anything without my aunt's consent, and her ideas about the education I need are so different from my own. For instance, I wanted to study French this year, because my mother was a Frenchwoman, born and reared in France, and she told me so much about her country that I wanted to learn its beautiful language. But my aunt never did like my mother, just because she was French. I have often heard her say to my father, "I don't see why in the world you married a foreigner."

Well, father was perfectly willing for me to study French, but my aunt said, "I want her to take Latin, because all of us took Latin when we went to school." So then father gave me orders to take Latin. I don't like the language at all. I have tried to like it, but it just doesn't interest me. I would much rather study my dear mother's language. And as for her being a "foreigner," she was as loyal to America as anyone born in this country.

But what do you advise me to do about my problem? I am very unhappy now and I feel I never shall find any happiness at this rate. Your truly, MARIE D.

Doors of Opportunity

Open to the Dauntless

DEAR MARIE D.: Have you heard of a book entitled, "Grandma Called It Carnal"? I have forgotten the name of the author, but the book—which came out a couple of years ago and enjoyed a great success—was an autobiographical story of an orphaned girl's growing-up years, spent under her Puritan grandmother's despotic rule. I read the book in snatches, and remember it more for its qualities of poignancy and buoyant humor than for the incidents described.

But there was a girl—a real girl, not a character—who was required by her austere grandmother to endure the most Spartan discipline and self-denial. Grandmother had the idea, apparently, that whatever gave pleasure—however innocent, to heart or spirit—was an invention of the Devil.

There is one episode, heartbreaking even to the reader, in which the girl—having been forcibly and finally separated from some loved pet: the only living thing, so far as she knew, that loved her—goes into the yard and throws her arms about a tree, in a very passion of anguished loneliness. She whispers to the tree to please love her; to be her companion and friend.

Yet out of such training and such experiences emerged the grown-up woman who could write the unflinching book, "Grandma Called It Carnal," without a trace of bitterness and, indeed, with an exquisite, tender appreciation of the high moral courage and tremendous integrity of the invincible old lady who dared hurt her own heart in the interests of being, as she thought, properly and constructively severe in the handling of her grandchild.

In other words, here was a girl who, instead of letting unbending and unfeeling discipline "get her down," rather assimilated the painful experience into her sensitive spirit and brought it forth, at a later date, in the form of a unique and beautiful literary contribution. As someone has said, "Genius is sky-born and will arise"—and this girl's affinity-for-living was not to be forever denied. Eventually she emerged, on her own power, from the rigid mold into which orphanhood had cast her, to become a significant figure in the larger social scene.

And so it can be—and will be—with you, if you are driven by both a genuine feeling for, and need of, those forms of expression (of personal articulation) afforded by music, as well as by the incomparable lucidity of the French way of thinking and speaking. If your mother has, indeed, transmitted to you a singer's gift and an artist's sense of his true vocation; and has passed on to you a spiritual identification with the French view of life; and if you are absolutely intent on mastering these mediums-of-expression, you may be sure that doors-of-opportunity will open, in time, to yield you the necessary instruction.

Frozen Food Use Shows Big Gain

American homemakers are exploring more and more the new cooking world opened by the quick-freezing process, the Frozen Food Research Bureau reports. In the last 12 months, a billion pounds of commercially frozen foods have been used. One million Americans are using frozen-food lockers and the introduction of home deep-freezing equipment has resulted in a more widespread use of quick-frozen foods than ever.

The following recipe makes a nutritious and appetizing casserole dish, using two fresh frozen products.

Sea Food Casserole—Mix together 1 pound spaghetti or macaroni, 2 cans cream tomato soup, 2 cans shrimp, 1 small package frozen mushrooms and 1 pound fresh frozen corn, and place in casserole. Top with 1 cup grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until hot through.

BEWARE OF COLDS NOW!

Contagious Colds are Spreading Take These Time-Tested Precautions

Keep out of crowds as much as possible. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Don't take needless chances. Don't experiment with untried medications. And be sure to have these two time-tested home-approved treatments on hand, ready for use.

At the First Sign of a Cold

Be ready to help prevent many colds from developing. At the first warning sneeze, sniffle, or irritated feeling in your nose—use Vicks Vapo-Rub. Just a few drops up each nostril. Right away you can feel Vapo-Rub stimulating Nature's own cold-fighting defenses. Used in time, it actually helps to keep many colds from developing.

Also use Vapo-Rub for swift relief from the suffocating stuffiness and congestion of a head cold.

If a Cold Develops

(Some colds get by all precautions)

Thoroughly massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks Vapo-Rub, then spread on a thick layer of Vapo-Rub, cover with a warm cloth, and go to bed. Vapo-Rub brings wonderful relief and invites restful sleep. Vapo-Rub stimulates the skin like a warming poultice, while its medicinal vapors are breathed into the cold-irritated air passages. Often when morning comes, most of the cold's discomforts are gone.

Now Be Prepared—Get a bottle of Vicks Vapo-Rub today and take the above precautions. They may save you a lot of sickness and worry. Be sure to read package enclosures for complete, helpful directions for use.

Hair and Wear Problems Now Face Resorters

Resorters in the South and West this time of year have their problems.

Take hair. Hair gets wet in the ocean. A new remedy now being tried out is the "kerchief with curls." Artificial curls made of genuine hair are attached to a bright cotton "kerchief." You tie the kerchief around your head and the nice dry curls are yours, if you can make anybody believe it.

Bik resorters are thinking of weightier phases of fashion, too. They are selecting and rejecting new silhouettes, colors, accessories. Their decisions will have a big effect on how to dress next spring, so we may as well be prepared.

The sloping shoulder is replacing the square shoulder in resort suits. Bathing suits are more covered up, and the ballerina fashion is declining. Midriffs that used to go entirely bare now are half covered with loosely woven fabric.

Haute couture continues as a strong trend. Economy has the approval of resorters, who try to buy clothes that can be worn both North and South. The sarong influence appears in bathing suits, slacks, dancing frocks.

In accessories, resorters like matched sets of jewelry. They are not so sure about the two-in-one hat, where a straw brim is superimposed on a separate fabric turban. They say the brims slip.

Resorters are pushovers for trick shoe styles. They are buying the new "crystal lace" shoes, made of a transparent plastic overlaid with braid. They like embroidered straw slippers and Grecian leather sandals.

Pinafore Makes a Comeback

Women cling to anything that's youthful. The little girl's pinafore introduced by Mary Lewis, style authority, last summer gained popular acclaim by women almost overnight. Miss Lewis, who has popularized everything from the cloche hat to Javanese batik beach clothes, is bringing the pinafore into the sunlight again this year. It has lived through fashion critics' questioning because women like it. As shown above, its fresh, youthful style makes a woman look and feel young. Its simple style makes it easy to wear. With changes of shirts and blouses it looks like a different outfit every time. In this star-studded cotton pinafore in patriotic colors, pockets for storing personal trinkets are featured. Underneath is a surprise outfit—a white pique playsuit.

Waist-Whittling Is Necessary To Wear New Spring Styles

By Ida Jean Kain

WITH FASHIONS hewing so closely to the waistline, a gal scarcely knows which way to turn. Either you've got a slim waist or you have to slim your waist. Once you get the knack of waistline whittling and settle down to it, you'll find it comes easy. Any exercise in which you stretch up to pull the ribs away from the hips, or twist the shoulders sideward while keeping the hips still or vice versa, or combine a stretch with a sideward bend, will give your waist a neat trim.

If you are determined and accurate, you can take from half an inch to an inch off your waistline in a week. Here is a set of exercises that will do it—provided you do them.

POSITION: Standing on the knees with arms stretched above the head.

MOVEMENT: Bend slowly sideward as you continue to stretch up—that will pull you sideward through the midsection. Come back to position, and bend slowly to the other side.

Focus Stretch

On Midriff

The points to be watched in that exercise are these: Focus the stretch on the midriff—don't hunch the shoulders. They should be down and relaxed. And keep the abdominal muscles pulled up and the hips tucked under.

Before you go on to the next exercise, flop over on the floor and let go with all the muscles, particularly those which have just been through their paces. You must make a point of relaxing—otherwise you will rush through one exercise after another and that is a waste of nervous energy. Besides, you need to pause and get your bearings so that your next exercise will also be accurately performed.

POSITION: Stand on the knees with knees apart, and arms stretched out at sides, shoulder level.

MOVEMENT: Bending sideward, touch the fingers to the floor at the left side. Return to position, pull up with the abdominal muscles, and touch fingers to floor at right. Repeat the exercise 12 times, very slowly and accurately. If you cheat—let the middle slump, the hips jut out in back, or the knees bend—you lose the good effects. Afterward, shrug your shoulders loosely and relax. That will prevent muscle soreness. Then go on the following one.

MOVEMENT: Bend to the right side and slide the hand down the leg to the ankle as you continue the upstretch of the left arm. Grasp the ankle to give the waist a final tug, then come back

First Lady Negotiating A Crowded Calendar

40 Entertained at Luncheon Party; However, Lack of March Engagements Brings Rumor She Weighs Tour of Americas

By Hope Ridings Miller

DON'T BE SURPRISED if Mrs. Roosevelt takes off on a good-will tour of South America in the spring. A number of press women who regularly cover her conferences have a hunch—well, rather more than that—that the First Lady is contemplating just such a trip and that she probably will start on it some time in March.

Hope Ridings Miller

Anyway, she's not making any engagements in Washington for that entire month, nor for early in April neither. And she has carefully sidestepped a denial that she has a very special trip scheduled for some time in the spring. Twice asked point-blank, at her press conference, if she was planning to go to South America, she gracefully evaded the question—saying the first time she hadn't heard "anything about it," and then that neither of the "two persons" who could tell her about such a trip had done so yet.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Roosevelt is negotiating a crowded White House social calendar which yesterday featured a large ladies luncheon in honor of wives of the Supreme Court members.

Red carnations, stelia, pussy willow and gloriosum fern decorated the long table at which the 40 guests were seated. In keeping with procedure traditionally observed at such parties, guests upon arrival were shown the table chart and carefully instructed where they were to sit.

The company assembled in the Blue Drawing Room, where Mrs. Roosevelt greeted them shortly after all guests had arrived. Later, they were ushered into the State Dining Room, where the luncheon took place. Coffee was served afterward in the Red Drawing Room, and Mrs. Roosevelt lingered there to chat with her guests for almost half an hour.

MRS. WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. William O. Douglas and Mrs. Louis Brandeis represented the Supreme Court contingent. Also present was Mrs. William Teahan, sister of Justice Frank Murphy, and Mrs. Sanford L. Rariden, sister of Justice Willis Van Devanter, retired.

Others there included Mrs. Jefferson Caffery, wife of the Ambassador to Brazil; Mrs. John L. Sullivan, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Matthew F. McGuire, wife of the Assistant to the Attorney General; Mrs. Lewis Compton, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Grover B. Hill, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, Mrs. Virgil L. Paterson, Mrs. Richard C. Moore, Mrs. William Bryden, Mrs. George H. Brett.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, was there; as were Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, wife of the United States Minister to Sweden; Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court; Miss Harriet Elliott, of the Council of National Defense; Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Allie Freed, Miss Lorena Hickok, Mrs. Frank B. Jewett, Mrs. Frank Boucher, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. James L. Laddlow, of New York; Miss Frances Lay, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, Mrs. Edmund W. Starling, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Miss Malvina Thompson, Mrs. James M. Helm and Miss Regine Kurlander.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet will be off January 15 by motor for St. Augustine, Fla., to spend several weeks at the Monson Hotel, joining them there will be Mr. Benet's nephew, Stephen Vincent Benet, the noted writer, and the latter's wife, who are going down from their home in New York. Stephen Benet is to give the principle lecture at the meeting of the Historical Society of St. Augustine on January 22, and his uncle and aunt will be in the audience. Mr. and Mrs. Benet expect to return to Washington the first week in February and will resume their Sunday "at homes" after that. They will not receive this Sunday.

At least one Cabinet hostess regrets that she has only one official "at home" scheduled for this season. She's Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, who says she enjoys receiving. "But they won't let me do it but once this year," she wailed. Her reception is on the calendar for next Wednesday. . . . A Washington woman who was toying with the idea of entertaining at a dinner for Archduke Otto was a bit perturbed as to where his imperial highness should be seated. She took her problem to somebody at the State Department, I understand; but she got very little help there. "As far as his rank goes in this country," she was told, "he's just Mr. Otto, of Hapsburg, and can be seated anywhere."

A Washington newspaperwoman who recently wrote a piece about the Duchess of Windsor's wardrobe, sent a copy to the duchess. By return mail she received this terse reply from her secretary: "I am desired by the Duchess of Windsor to acknowledge receipt of the article you thoughtfully sent to her." . . . A popular debutante at a recent party was overheard talking to a friend who had recently become engaged. "How marvelous!" she exclaimed. "Now you can relax!"

Illness Keeps Mrs. Grady, Honor Guest, From Party

Although the honor guest could not be present, the party that Mrs. Basil Manly planned for her took place yesterday just the same. Arranged as a farewell fete for Mrs. Henry P. Grady, who will leave early next month for San Francisco, the event was a small luncheon at the Manly home on Sedgewick Street.

Mrs. Grady has been ill for several days and could not be present, but her hostess decided to give the party anyway. Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark of Idaho, was the ranking guest. Others there were Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Harold G. Moulton, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Bulkeley Griffin, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Miss Maxine Davis.

Plans Cruise via Inland Route

Leaving the later part of this month, Mrs. Bishop Hill will go to Florida aboard the Floy, a 26-foot cruiser owned by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Walker, who are planning to cruise down the inland waterway to the sunny South. While in Ormond Beach, which is near Daytona, Mrs. Hill will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Noah, of this city, and Greenwich, Conn. The party will be gone a month.

Capitalite Fetes Windsors Today

With the Duke and Duchess of Windsor due to arrive at Cat Cay in the Bahamas today, the place is abuzz with excitement—and Washingtonians.

Mrs. Owen B. Winters, the former Louise Harrison Gwynn, will entertain at a luncheon today for the Windsors at her home, High Tide, which was completed last spring. Mrs. Winters, with her mother, Mrs. William C. Gwynn, left Washington the day after Christmas for her home in the British West Indies. The Duke of Windsor is scheduled to dedicate the new golf course, Windsor Links, today.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, of this city, are vacationing there and are stopping at the Cat Cay Manor house for several weeks. Also there is Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery. Several other people from the Capital are planning to visit this garden spot in late winter. Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchinson, possibly accompanied by her brother, Richard, is planning to visit Mrs. Winters in March. Robert Niebold—who was there last year to decorate the new home—hopes to make the trip also.

Once a mere dot on the map, Cat Cay is fast turning into a celebrated spot. Movie Actor Errol Flynn visits there often as do the Howard Crosleys and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheelin, of New York. Mrs. Marion Hassler, also of New York, has just completed a home there.

The Jack Fries In Washington For Brief Visit

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fries, whose marriage several days ago out West made the headlines, are in Washington for several days and are stopping at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Fries was divorced recently from Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. She and her husband, who is president of the T. W. A. Airline, were married at a ceremony to which they rode on horseback.

After their stay here they will go on to New York and then to Kansas City. Later Mr. and Mrs. Fries will head South.

Princess Martha To Go to Canada With Husband

Crown Princess Martha of Norway will accompany her husband, Crown Prince Olav, on his forthcoming departure for Canada. The couple will be the guests this week-end of the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, and Princess Alice, at Government House in Ottawa.

Later the crown prince will visit the Norwegian Air Training School at Toronto, where his countrymen are training to fight with the British.

Wallaces To Attend Fete

Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Wallace have accepted invitations to attend the elaborate "Presidential" election dinner to be held at the Mayflower Hotel Sunday, January 19, and will head a list of many distinguished honor guests who will be on hand for one of the most brilliant events of the inaugural activities here.

Others who will sit at the head table are: Attorney General and Mrs. Jackson, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Walker, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wickard, the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Perkins, and the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Welles.

The Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn will be accompanied by his sister, Miss Lucinda Rayburn. The Ambassador to Mexico Josephus Daniels and Mrs. Daniels will be present for the festivities as will Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. Mrs. Halsey will accompany her husband, Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate.

The Army will be represented by Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and the Marine Corps by Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the United States Marines.

Others who have accepted invitations are Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Flynn; Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, D. D., president of Catholic University, and Dr. Luther A. Weigle, president of the Federal Council of Churches of America.

Michael Francis Doyle, chairman of arrangements for the dinner, will act as toastmaster, and will be joined by Mrs. Doyle, who will come from their home in Philadelphia for the event.

St. Quentin Returns to N.Y.

Back in New York again after several weeks in France is the former French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin. He arrived in Brooklyn on Wednesday aboard the Portuguese liner Carvalho Araujo.

The count, who will represent his country as envoy to Brazil, has been at Vichy. He originally planned to return here by clipper and intended to come to Washington to see his friends here. But the embassy staff yesterday did not know whether he would carry out these plans. Count de Saint-Quentin's successor, Gaston Henri-Haye, will go to New York this week-end and expects to see him there.

Count de Saint-Quentin left several months ago to return to France to consult with the Vichy government.

Mrs. Halliday Postpones Visit

Mrs. John Halliday, wife of the well-known actor of stage and screen, who was planning to come here early this month for a visit with her mother, Mrs. J. Clinton Tobey, has postponed her visit because of the serious illness of Mr. Halliday.

The latter, who came East to play a leading role with Ina Claire in a play, was stricken with pneumonia shortly before Christmas and is now in Harkness Pavilion Hospital in New York.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. EDWIN WATSON, chairman of the inaugural "Concert," has changed its name to "inaugural gala"—because she finds herself with so much talent lined up in fields other than musical.

Not only will there be famous musicians but stars from the movies (Nelson Eddy and Charlie Chaplin) and the stage (Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt).

DUDLEY HARMON, Robert Sherwood will serve as master of ceremonies, and scenes from his play, "There Shall Be No Night," will be read by Fontanne and Lunt.

A WEARY inaugural staff of workers in Mr. Davies' office reports that the demand for tickets is even greater than four years ago. They are all working overtime these nights.

Seven hundred special official automobile tags for the big day have just been issued by the committee. No. 1 went to Mr. Davies, the chairman; No. 13 was drawn by Earl Godwin, the publicity director. They show a blue silhouette of the Capitol against a white background.

Mrs. Davies is expected back from Palm Beach in time for the festivities. Mr. Davies' daughter, Mrs. Aldace Walker, has just returned, after a visit to her father in Florida.

Women's Clubs Told How to Aid in Defense

Programs Prepared by Sally Woodward Are Indorsed by Harriet Elliott; Outline Practical Tasks in Home Communities

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

Women's clubs that have been asking the question, "How can we help in the national defense program?" will find it answered, at least in part, by a kit of programs prepared by Sally Woodward, of the Consumer Relations Department of General Mills, in Minneapolis. Miss Woodward was in Washington yesterday to submit the material to Miss Harriet Elliott, of the Council of National Defense, for her final "O. K." which it received.

Unlike many study programs which go round in circles of theory, these lead to action. Recognizing the imperative nature of demands to be made on all people of the Nation under the plan for total defense, the outlines are designed to direct the women's organizations of America into practical work in their communities.

The first of a series of six pamphlets explains briefly the setup of the National Defense Administration.

Compton Tells Of Speed-up In Navy Yards

Civilian Brains Help to Produce Finest, He Says

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Lewis Compton told the members and guests of the Woman's National Democratic Club that the Navy was able to place under contract all combatant tonnage authorized and appropriated, in two hours after the President signed the Navy appropriation bill. Mr. Compton was guest of honor and speaker at a dinner given at the clubhouse last evening.

This was possible because the Navy secured from Congress the power to negotiate contracts on the "if and when" basis while the bills were still in committee. This, said Mr. Compton, was a great help and time-saver. The Navy got an increase of 11 per cent in June and 70 per cent in September, making an 81 per cent increase in ships, planes, people and shore equipment.

Now, Mr. Compton stated, the Navy has over five billion dollars in contracts for ships, planes and public works. All are on schedule, or ahead. Whereas four years ago it took 32 months to build a destroyer, now it takes only 18. Mr. Compton said the Navy has used foresight and taken few chances—"and the cry for speed is nothing new so far as the Navy goes," he declared.

The Navy's phase of the defense program covers two important problems: training and production, he said.

The training of personnel, both civilian and military, said Mr. Compton, is of vital importance right now. Men must be trained to man the ships and the development of the necessary shore facilities to which to train them is a current problem facing the Navy.

One important thing is the standardization of design so that the ships' parts can be duplicated. No changes are allowed. Another thing is that private yards are permitted to buy machinery and equipment for use in building ships which is identical to that used by the Navy. In this way ships can be built for the Navy by private concerns quicker than the Navy can do it, owing to the necessary long negotiations connected with letting bids, etc.

Also, Mr. Compton added, the Navy has turned out designing to private designers. Contracts are made with private architects and by tapping that source, designs can be gotten out quicker. "Due to the competition of civilian brains with brains of the Navy, our ships are the most modern in the world," continued Mr. Compton.

Mrs. Compton was also a guest of honor and the dinner was presided over by Miss Mary E. Baker, second vice president of the club, in the absence of Mrs. Claude Pepper, president.

American Youth Needs Speech Training, Mrs. Roosevelt Says

At the opening of Mrs. Hugh Butler's public speaking class yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt was photographed with Mrs. Karl LeCompte, of Iowa, who introduced her, and Mrs. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, who was chairman of the program.

Only Way to Enable Them to Hold Their Own With Communist and Fascist Group, She Tells Mrs. Butler's Class in Speaking

Training in public speaking is needed by American youth if they are to hold their own in the battle of words with Communist and Fascist groups, Mrs. Roosevelt declared yesterday. Addressing the opening session of Mrs. Hugh Butler's public speaking class at Pierce Hall for the third consecutive year, she urged the women interested in the subject to use their influence to have schools and colleges throughout the country teach students to "think on their feet," she said.

"Youngsters trained by the Communists say what they have been taught to say and put it all over the others because they repeat it and repeat it and repeat it," she said. "It often looks as though there were but one point of view at the meeting, but that isn't true at all. It is interesting to talk to the young people after-ward and hear them say, 'We didn't agree with the way those kids expressed themselves, but we couldn't think quickly enough to say what we thought.'"

Young people, she said, should be able to put into words the meaning of this country to them, of its traditions and to say what they think at the time. What they say may not always be the result of great knowledge, she continued, but they should be able to state what they think at the time and this will enable older persons to gain an understanding of their viewpoint, which often is not known but should be.

Young Americans should be trained in speaking, debating and answering questions in public, she said. They should be trained to think things through and to support their statements with reasons for their knowledge and belief. Unless this is done, she said, she did not see how there could be the expression of enthusiasm for our way of life necessary to combat different beliefs and the idealisms of different forms of government.

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized the necessity for a person's being interested in a subject in order to discuss it intelligently and advised the members of the class to "forget you are an individual there to make a talk. Keep what you have in mind to tell before you instead of the individual impression you may make, which is only a dress, a hat and a collection of features. The important thing to fix your mind on is what you want others to get from your mind."

Mrs. Clarence Cannon, wife of Representative Cannon, of Missouri, acted as chairman of the meeting and Mrs. Karl LeCompte, wife of Representative LeCompte, of Iowa, winner of first prize in last year's class, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt.

Several speakers followed the First Lady, including Mrs. John Murdock, of Arizona, who told of how she helped her husband in his campaign last summer; Mrs. Fred Bradley, of Michigan; Mrs. George Grant, of Alabama; Mrs. E. C. Gathings, of Arkansas; Mrs. Xavier Vigeant, Mrs. Truman Smith, Mrs. Frank A. Allen, Jr., Mrs. Grace Porter Hopkins and Mrs. John Donaldson, of the A. U. W. Mrs. Walter Maloney also spoke, and then closed the meeting with the singing of "The American Creed" and "There Will Always Be An England."

EILEEN GEORGE AND MILTON DAVIS HOOK-UP. Eileen George, singing dynamo of the Anchor Room and Milton Davis, novachord leader of the Rainbow Room orchestra, are almost ready to launch a new radio period via WJIS. Eileen's contralto will stand out against the expert novachord background of Maestro Davis. This will mark the first hook-up of star entertainers from different Washington hotels as a radio attraction. Eileen is regarded by many as our town's finest night spot singer (she does "Pagliacci" and Broadway tunes with equal facility, has remarkable range). Milton Davis stands second to none as a band leader, was the first musician to present novachord music in the Capital. Names will be placed on the dotted lines in a couple of days with provisions for appearances two or three times a week.

Al Bortoff, notable marimbaphonist-drummer, will sound off with Milt Herth's Trio at the Neptune Room tomorrow. You've probably heard him on the air with Fibber McGee and Molly. He plays the "Flight of the Bumblebee" just two seconds over Fritz Kreisler's record time of one minute.

BIRTH OF A DANCE TEAM. Columbus and Carroll, now dancing at the Shoreham, first met at the President's Birthday Ball in 1939. Both were appearing in the Blue Room, but La Carroll was known as dancer Kathryn Smith while Charlie Columbus' dance partner was Harriet Caperton, Virginia socialite and cousin of the Duchess of Windsor. Harriet married a few months later, gave up her professional career. Charlie met Kathryn again at this stage and presto! The new dance team of Columbus and Carroll was born. It's strictly a professional association (they say). Kathryn's engagement to Tommy Loughran, former lightweight champion was rumored lately. Her father, boxer Joe Smith, was Loughran's trainer.

"PAL JOEY" newest Manhattan hit musical, is being given a whirl by alert Pete Macias and his Lounge Riviera band. Titles of the "Pal Joey" tunes will give you a glimpse of the show. "Do It the Hard Way," "You Mustn't Kick It Around," "Plant You Now, Dig You Later" and "I Could Write a Book."

TRIOKA GOES SUPER-SOCIAL. Social registers are packed in ten deep at Troika these evenings. It's all the doing of Pat Brooks' chic, ladylike, well-known and liked by all the upper-bracket folks. Her night spot debut in Troika was as brilliant as her social debut and hundreds of to give you an attended both events. Patricia was nothing less than exquisite in white brocade with loads of pink and red posies trailing from her shoulders. Her voice is charming, shows the effect of those vocal lessons she's been taking since she used to sing in the Lounge Riviera just for fun.

There'll be a "sneak preview" of Carmen Cavallaro's heralded band at the Casino Royal. The band starts at 10:30 at the cocktail hour. If you want to see them in action before their gala Cosmos premiere tonight, this is your chance.

JUDY'S A JOY. Baby-faced Judy Clark who cuts up on the bandstand with Ray Heister's band in the Wardman Metropole Room, is the gingeriest item we've seen for months. Cute as a button, my eye! Judy's as cute as a string of firecrackers. To give you an idea of "Friendship" number done by her and Ray is even more fun than the version done by Bert Lahr and Frances Williams in "Duck and Cover." Amusing, too, is Judy's meek, demure, butter-wont-melt-in-your-mouth air before she starts to take the place apart.

HI HAT PICTURE. Eventually you see everyone in Hi Hat. A full blooded, big chief, Floyd Maybury from Oklahoma, was there the other afternoon. And in another corner was Representative John S. McMillan, of South Carolina, enjoying Jimmy Summerville's Irish melody.

CHIC IS THE WORD for La Salle Versailles. The newest Pan-American dancings and sambas are played by Burrus Williams' Orchestra. Jean Cuthon leads the conga line when it isn't single in the boulevardier manner. The patrons constitute a nightly style show, are so discriminating that Head Walter Leo says that one out of every two parties orders wine.

Only ten-string guitar in town is the one faunted by Bill Gibson of Paul Kain's fivepiece in Mayfair. Bill's guitar special, "Stagefright" and "Chickadee Swing," invariably set musicians off into a string of superlatives.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Capitol Hill employees will get preferred treatment under the Ramspeck Bill. Civil Service Commission has ruled that hill employees affected will get three chances to pass the noncompetitive mental tests. All other Federal employees are limited to a single test and those flunking must be separated within six months. Only those hill employees who have served four years (not necessarily consecutive) and who have been separated involuntarily and without prejudice will be eligible for Civil Service.

The commission has ruled that the bill does not apply to laborers, messengers, elevator operators, carpenters and others not engaged in clerical work. Hill employees, however, will have to go through plenty of red tape before they can be certified. First, they must find themselves jobs and get appointing officers to request the commission to certify them. Noncompetitive mental tests then will be given. Hill employees involuntarily separated a year before the passage of the bill, which was November 26, will be eligible for status.

Meantime, the commission is chafing over the delay by departments in recommending employees for merit. It's been more than a month since the commission asked department and agency heads to make recommendations and to date only several small agencies have responded. Several department heads are understood to be looking for ways and means to exempt large sections of their employees on the ground that personnel shouldn't be disturbed during the emergency. An effective answer is that President Roosevelt has ordered all national defense agencies under Civil Service, the most recent being the new office for Production Management.

Postmaster General Frank Walker must be pretty certain of being reappointed. He's looking for a house to move his family. He's lived in a hotel since he joined the Cabinet in September. . . . Sam B. Riddick, WPA press assistant, has been called into active military service. He'll be assigned to the Navy at Pearl Harbor. . . . A Federal official has suggested that Census be compelled to speed up its work on tabulating the 1940 census to make room for the overflow of expanding Government agencies. Census claims it is working at top speed and that it will need the building when the temporary work is completed.

Administration leaders will place Representative Harry P. Beam, Illinois Democrat, on the Dies Committee if, and when the committee is continued. Beam is a New Dealer. . . . The five members of the Civil Aeronautics Board have been invited to attend the air races at Miami over the week-end, not at their own expense. Each has refused. . . . An "information please" on the Ramspeck Bill is being held at 4:45 p. m. today in South Agriculture auditorium under sponsorship of UFWA.

James McLern, who quit as assistant to the Agriculture Secretary to manage the Vice Presidential campaign of Henry Wallace, has been offered the job of secretary to the Vice President-elect. . . . Mary Hiss, formerly of Agriculture, is now Wallace's secretary. . . . Kendall Foss has been appointed acting director of information at REA. . . . Rosanna McQuestin, secretary to Assistant Commerce Secretary Robert Hinkley, has quit to help manage an airport at Palo Alto, Calif. . . . R. W. Trullinger, assistant chief of Agriculture's experimental stations, will be awarded the 1941 John Deere gold medal for distinguished achievement in the application of science and art to the soil.

The Federal Reserve System monetary plan which would take away some of the President's powers was drafted under the direction of Chairman Marriner S. Eccles. Those who did the actual work included E. A. Goldenweiser, research and statistics director; Elliott Thurston, special assistant; Chester Morrill, secretary; Prof. John H. Williams, of Harvard; and Walter Lichtenstein, secretary of the advisory council. President Roosevelt: It is said, was given a copy of the plan before it was announced.

Fire in Loft of Gun Shed Damages Equipment Of District's 260th Coast Artillery Regiment

GUARDSMEN ROUTED BY FIRE—Troops of the 260th Coast Artillery, District National Guard, about to leave for camp in Texas, were smoked out yesterday when fire started in their quarters at Maine Avenue and O Street Southwest.

Fire believed to have been started by overheated flues in the loft of the 260th Coast Artillery gun shed at Maine Avenue and O Street Southwest yesterday destroyed two 3-ton trucks and an undetermined amount of field equipment and shop tools. The trucks destroyed were an empty 755-gallon tank belonging to Battery B and a machine shop truck of Headquarters Battery.

An estimate of damage was not immediately available. Lieut. Col. Roy S. Mann appointed a board consisting of First Lieut. Earl F. Fischer and Second Lieut. George W. Booser, Jr., to investigate.

The blaze was discovered by a fire guard, who informed Capt. James H. Heizer, of Battery B. Several enlisted men turned in alarms.

The review, scheduled for 2:30 p. m. Sunday, will be held on the Ellipse. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, and War Department dignitaries will review the regiment.

The first battalion, going by road with approximately 500 men and most of the regiment's motor vehicles and big guns, will leave Washington early Monday. The second battalion, taking almost 300 men by rail, will march from the armory at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest Monday at 6:30 p. m. for Union Station. The battalion's train, in two sections, will pull out of Washington at 8 p. m.

An advance detachment, consisting of 3 officers and 35 men, will leave tomorrow to make preparations at Fort Bliss.

Thirty-nine new officers recently promoted from the ranks are: Capt. Charles F. Buck, First Lieut. Joseph W. Marshall, James R. Alderton, Kenneth C. Texter and Charles A. Kenny and Second Lieut. Robert E. Archer, James M. Matthews, Richard R. Roach, Rutherford Craven, David Likes, Max A. Setzke, Charles W. Lonsdale, Grant W. Van Denmark, John Schultz, Veto Blets, George W. Booser, Jr., James W. Wassell, John R. Henderson, Cummings Sanborn, Roy P. Finch, Perry O. Foust, David S. Osborne, Francis M. Dorsett, Willis F. Decker, Herbert H. Fisher, Carvius W. Wessburg.

The District's 260th Coast Artillery will leave a trail of happy church treasurers behind on its motor trip from Washington to Fort Bliss, Tex.

Prevented by regulations from purchasing supplies through the regimental supply officer, the commander, Col. Walter W. Burns, worked out his ration problem in a new way. Letters have been sent to towns where overnight halts are planned, arranging for ladies' auxiliaries of churches to prepare breakfast and dinner and put up box lunches.

Officers figured that about $600 at $1 a man will be left with the churches where stops are made.

Count Tomadelli To Protest Bail Set in Fraud Case

Count Jwan J. Tomadelli, held here in connection with an alleged $500,000 swindle, will make his first bid for release before Justice James Morris in the District Court today.

Arrested Tuesday night, Tomadelli was jailed when he failed to post a $75,000 bond set by Commissioner Needham C. Tamm. Tomadelli is alleged to have swindled a New Jersey businessman of $500,000 by means of a scheme for producing cold light.

Attorney Myron G. Ehrlich seeks a reduction of the bond, which he claims is so high that it violates the Constitution. District Attorney Edward M. Curran wants the bond raised to $100,000.

As explained by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst, the viaduct will pass over the terminal yard, make a connection with New York Avenue and continue to an extension of Sixth Street Northeast. The connection with Sixth Street extended will afford a new direct route from the north down Sixth Street to Construction of an additional viaduct over the Washington Terminal yard, connecting Ninth Street and Brentwood Road Northeast with New York Avenue and with Sixth Street Northeast, was assured yesterday following an agreement between the Commissioners and officials of the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroad companies.

Negotiations for the viaduct have been under way for several years. The construction, entire cost of which will be borne by the companies, will be of steel design. Cost of the project, soon to be advertised for bids, is estimated at $500,000.

500 Taxicab Drivers Hear Safety Talk

Judge Neilson Admonishes Police To Adopt Rules Of 'Common Sense'

By Howard F. Wentworth

Judge George Neilson, of Police Court, last night admonished police to adopt rules of "reason and common sense" in enforcing minor traffic laws and at the same time warned 500 taxi drivers to "stay out of his court" in connection with major infractions.

The judge spoke at a mass meeting of cab drivers in the Departmental auditorium, called by company officials and District authorities in the interest of greater traffic safety on city streets.

"Meetings of this type," said Judge Neilson, "will go far toward making Washington a safer place in which to live. There should be more—and they should be frequent."

He echoed the sentiments of Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, member of the House District Committee, who acted as chairman. Nichols lauded the purpose of the conference and pressed the taxmen for their low accident record over the years.

"In admonishing the drivers to 'stay out of court,' Judge Neilson urged rigid enforcement of flagrant violations such as reckless and drunken driving. He suggested, however, that police temper their duties with 'common sense' when making arrests for minor parking violations.

"There can be no hard-headed attitude in traffic enforcement," said Neilson. "Good enforcement comes from a clear understanding of the problem at hand and it takes a level-headed hard-head to do a proper job."

Considering the number of miles driven each day, the District cab drivers are the safest group of motorists, Judge Neilson told his audience. He appealed to the taxi operators to "set an example" for safe driving in the city.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the new police accident investigation unit, reviewed the work of his squad since its inception and said success of its operation depends to a large extent on the attitude of taximen.

Accident Every 40 Minutes. He cited figures showing an average of 11 persons are injured here every day and an average of 36 accidents occur. This, he said, represented an injury every two minutes. A person is killed, he added, on the average of every five days.

James Shanos, attorney for the District of Columbia Drivers Mutual Association, cosponsor of the meeting, urged the drivers to minimize their traffic violations and heed Judge Neilson's warning to "stay out of court."

Amid a few sprinkled bows, Shanos told the drivers they could expect fair treatment if they did appear.

Driving an average of 44,000 miles a year, the drivers were told they accounted last year for only .965 accidents—most of them minor. Also at the meeting were Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, his assistant, M. O. Eldridge, and various officials of the taxi companies.

A motion picture, "Singing Wheels," depicting the perils of reckless driving, closed the meeting.

Dorothy Thompson Discusses Youth Problems Here

Because twentieth century America is over "specialized and professionalized," the rising generation has lost the creative instinct fundamental to successful democracy, Dorothy Thompson, Washington Post columnist, declared last night in a lecture before the Public Administration Association, District Chapter, in the Agriculture Department auditorium.

"We have wonderful mechanics, but we don't know what to do with them," the writer declared. Because technological advances have outdistanced social advances, youth in its efforts to succeed, and in a world in which "nobody lives honestly or freely."

"We must change our attitude and get back to a more feeling, more organic way of life," Miss Thompson concluded.

Psychoanalytic Ass'n. To Repress Itself. Doubtless having subjected its dream of "perpetual" existence to professional handling, the American Psychoanalytic Association decided to call it all off yesterday.

The association was founded here in 1933 for perpetual "study and advancement of the psychoanalytic science and its application to psychopathic conditions as well as to psychology and the social sciences." But, the group said in a petition to the District Court filed by Attorney Fontaine C. Bradley, the association has been inactive for six years and now has no property, no credit and no stockholders. A dissolution order was requested.

Congress Heights Asks More Police to Guard Pupils

Citizens Declare 18 Crossings in Area Should Be Patrolled to Protect Children From Traffic Hazards

Congress Heights Citizens Association last night voted to petition the Police Department for an increased complement of policemen to protect crossings at the community's schools.

Out of 29 patrolmen in the Eleven-Eleven Precinct which serves the area only seven were on duty when a test count was made December 6, it was pointed out. There are 18 crossings near schools that should be patrolled to afford the children adequate protection, members asserted.

In a series of traffic resolutions, the unit urged that Fifth Street Avenue be extended to unclog the bottleneck at Eleventh Street and Nichols Avenue Southeast; that a traffic light be installed at Nichols Avenue and Portland Street, and that the gate to St. Elizabeth's Hospital be widened sufficiently to permit the passage of two cars abreast.

Members also asked the Capital Transit Co. to make permanent the bus which now operates from Fifth Street and Nichols Avenue to Alabama Avenue, Wheeler Road, and return on a shuttle basis.

American University Park. Previews of the proposed World Fair development for Washington were painted last night by Elton A. Shanos and William V. Mahoney in talks before a meeting of the American University Park Citizens' Association, held at Hurst Hall, American University.

The speakers said the project, if it materialized, would emphasize Pan American unity and strive to promote understanding among the 22 American nations.

Davis Tells Some 'Good Ones' as He Waits Jury's Call

William R. Davis, New York oil magnate who has figured in reports of Mexican oil negotiations and European peace deals, told a lot of good stories at Judiciary Square yesterday.

To the special grand jury investigating suspected violations of the election laws, Davis was a witness. The two associates who accompanied Davis said he was no "mystery man" at all, but "just a good guy" who won fame and fortune in the oil business.

The "good guy" regaled other witnesses, waiting like himself to testify with "off the record" anecdotes of his adventures. But what he told the grand jury he would not say.

Road Linking Gettysburg, D. C. Asked

Memorial Highway Would Be Valuable Defense Adjunct, Senator Davis Says

A bill proposing that the Federal Works Administrator construct a modern memorial highway linking the Lincoln Memorial in Washington and the Civil War battlefield of Gettysburg, Pa., was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Senator Davis, in a statement explaining the purpose of the plan, said such a road would serve as a valuable national defense adjunct. He criticized existing highways leading into the National Capital.

The proposed highway would cost from $9,000,000 to $14,000,000, depending upon the route chosen, Davis said.

"Those of us who have had frequent occasion to travel by highway to Pennsylvania, New York and points north and east, have been impressed by the lack of adequate highways leading to the National Capital," he explained.

"The main highway from Washington to the central part of Pennsylvania is narrow and winding. This project is but a part of a national program of superhighways which are fundamental to adequate defense of this Nation."

Senator Davis said that the Washington-Gettysburg Boulevard would be linked to the new Pennsylvania superhighway recently opened. Such highways are essential, he said, because Pennsylvania is first in production of military equipment and material.

"From the experience of this war and the last war in Europe, it can be seen that a nation's capital becomes a main point of military attack," he said.

Municipal Building Fire Delays Opening

A stubborn fire in cork insulation surrounding heat ducts in the new Municipal Building, Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue Northwest, kept firemen active for more than an hour yesterday.

The flooring and portions of partitions had to be ripped out to reach the blaze which spread between the sixth and seventh floors and the roof.

No estimate of damage was given nor were firemen able to determine the cause. It was estimated that the fire will delay opening of the new structure at least two weeks.

Hoplover Coaches Given Year's Notice at Yale

Some Might Be Retained, Miller States

Athletic Director Insists Action Is For Better Feeling Between Parties

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 9.—Yale coaches with one exception received a year's "notice" of their discharge today, but Athletic Director Edgar Miller tempered the action by intimating some might be retained.

Miller insisting that while this "notice" meant the coaches could feel free to seek other positions, the purpose mainly was to put "some what uncertain relations long existing between the university and the coaching staffs on an understandable and more permanent basis."

It is probable, he said, that new arrangements would take the form of written contracts, supplanting the verbal understanding now in force.

Only Emerson (Spike) Nelson, whose surprise appointment as head football coach was announced January 4, was unaffected.

The Yale athletic boss said he planned to work out individual and more permanent contracts covering a period beyond January 15, 1941, and would start interviewing the coaches on Monday.

Miller said the "terms" of the new contracts would be "as favorable as the national situation and our own athletic policy and economic circumstances will permit."

Harry Bobo Wins Decision Over Barlund

Pittsburgh Fighter Takes Unanimous Verdict Over Finn

Baltimore, Jan. 9.—Harry Bobo, Pittsburgh colored heavyweight, won a unanimous decision over Gunnar Barlund, of New York, in a ten-round fight tonight.

Bobo weighed 202 and the Finnish slugger, 195.

There were no knockdowns, but Bobo had Barlund groggy and hanging on the ropes at the end. The Pittsburgh giant also opened a bad cut under Barlund's left eye in the second round.

In only two rounds, the third and fourth, was Bobo in trouble. The more experienced Finn worked in under the colored fighter's guard to pummel his body and for a time had him puzzled.

The third round was awarded to Barlund by Referee Bill Ellis on a low blow by Bobo and Barlund took the fourth on his in-fighting.

The fifth was even, but from there on it was all Bobo. The big Pittsburgher stood off Barlund with his left hand and at times lashed out with a vicious right cross with telling effect.

The Associated Press score sheet gave Bobo seven rounds and Barlund two and called one even.

Results of the preliminaries: Pete Galiano, 137, Baltimore, defeated Frankie Terranova, 140, New York, decision, 8 rounds.

Lou Transperanti, 122, Baltimore, defeated Marcus Pitte, 122, Washington, decision, 8 rounds.

Sluggers White, 196, New York, defeated Dave Chacon, 143, Los Angeles, by T. K. O. in sixth round of scheduled 8-rounder.

Mamakos, Zale Meet Tonight In Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Tony Zale, N. B. A. middleweight champion, and Steve Mamakos, 160-pounder from Washington, D. C., went through light exercises today in preparation for their ten-round nontitle fight tomorrow night in the Chicago Stadium.

Zale reported his weight today at 162 pounds, one more pound than the stipulated weight, while Mamakos said he tipped the beams at 150½. Setting a precedent, the usual day before the fight weigh-in ceremonies were skipped, in order to permit the fighters to step on the scales tomorrow night in the stadium dressing room, just before the opening gong. The boxers will weigh in wearing full ring equipment, with the exception of gloves.

Promoter Bill Rand said that in the event Mamakos defeats Zale tomorrow night, the latter will put his middleweight title on the auction block in a return bout with the Washington Greek boxer within six weeks.

The ten-round semifinal bout will pit two Chicago lightweights, Davey Day and Nick Castiglione, against each other. Day has not fought since he lost a hairline decision to Sammy Angott at Louisville, Ky., on the eve of last year's Kentucky Derby.

Bethesda Bowling Marks Set by Pugh

Lawrence Pugh, of Martins Five, rolling against Taster Diner in the Bethesda Businessmen's League last night, established two all-time league marks by bowling a 191 game and a high individual set of 460 at the Boulevard Alleys.

In his high game, Pugh counted three spares and added four straight strikes for his 191 total.

Tommy Tucker, of Hyson's Insurance, tallied a high game of 160 and 430 set in the Bethesda league. Johnny Norris, of Bohemian, had a 195 game and 413 set.

Willie Hoppe Collapses At Cue Match

Billiard Champion Stricken While Playing Against Jake Schaefer

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Willie Hoppe, world three-cushion billiard champion, collapsed tonight in the midst of his challenge match with Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, and was rushed to a hospital suffering from a kidney disorder and intestinal flu.

The match immediately was canceled and Schaefer, expressing concern over his rival's condition, announced he was relinquishing all claim to the title by default and that Hoppe would retain it.

At Hoppe's hotel late tonight, it was said that Hoppe, suffering from a high fever, was too sick to be removed to a hospital. The hotel physician refused to take responsibility for his transfer until he had regained some of his strength.

Hoppe had been manifestly ill since yesterday's match and it was revealed he had complained Tuesday of a cold in his back.

He entered tonight's match against the definite orders of his physician. The finish came in dramatic fashion. It was noticed that the veteran's knees were wobbly and that he hardly could proceed, but he kept doggedly at the game until he suddenly swayed.

An instant later his knees buckled and Referee Charles McElligott caught him as he fell.

Time o' War, Liberty Franc Race Victors

Coral Reef Purse Run in 2 Sections At Hialeah Park

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 9.—A split feature was offered here this dreary afternoon when the Coral Reef Purse, 7-furlong test for 4-year-olds and upward, was run as the fifth and sixth events. The first half saw Mrs. L. Lazare's Time O' War romping out in front all the way for a four lengths triumph at odds of $10.60 for $2.

Paul Codd's Snow was second, with Herbert M. Woolf's Riffled Clouds, the 6 to 5 choice, a half length behind. Racing over a deep, sloppy track, caused by hard overnight and morning rains, Time O' War was clocked in 1:27.4-5. Eddie Araro, his rider, had to carry five pounds overweight, but it looked as if his mount could have won with two jockeys on his back.

Another Easy One The second division of the Coral Reef resulted in another easy victory, this time for Mrs. T. Christopher's Liberty Franc, a recent Tropical Park winner which was scratched out of the Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, the previous afternoon.

The three-star mudder, with Wendell Ends up, just toyed with his company, leading virtually from the first jump and completing the trip three lengths on top in 1:27.5. The colt was an even-money choice.

Joseph Pepp's No Sir, slow to get started, was just as easily best of the others. Detroit Bull was third by a half dozen lengths.

Waugh Pop Out Waugh Pop was disqualified after finishing first in the three-way photo battle in the seventh event. Felsun, the $6.50 choice, was awarded the purse, while Sir Elmer received the place and Petee Gene the show.

Jockey A. Bodio was suspended 20 days, effective Saturday, January 11, to Monday, February 3, inclusive, for interfering with and obstructing Sir Elmer in the stretch run of the seventh race, for which offense his mount, Waugh Pop, was disqualified from first position.

Local National Pot Cakes Meet in Heavyweight Battle

Both Fighters In Comeback Roles Tonight

Bout Is Scheduled For 10 Rounds; New Jersey Boxer Installed Favorite

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 9.—Lou Nova, who was supposed to give Joe Louis an end of trouble in 1939, and Pat Comiskey, who was due in '40, fight it out in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night to correct a couple of mistakes.

At this writing, neither is any closer to a shot at the heavyweight championship than his own sweet dreams. The chances are the winner of this ten-rounder eventually will go on to the "heavy sugar," but right now they're just a couple of good heavyweights in there giving the good old college try.

Two years ago, when Nova came out of California and stopped Maxie Baer with a deep cut on Maxie's mouth, he was regarded as the hottest thing to come down the pike since they pulled Jim Braddock off a Jersey City pier. Then he made the mistake of climbing into the same ring with bold Antonio Gato. He was shipped back home, a sick, weary fellow, to spend several months in a hospital.

Then came Comiskey. Not long afterward, along came Patrick Edward Comiskey out of Patterson, N. J. They stood opponents up in front of him and he bowled them over so quickly and often that he picked up when you could hardly pick up your favorite newspaper without finding two routine details—the weather report and another knockout for Patrick Edward. His error was in getting the idea the big bad Baer would be a soft touch. It took him about 2½ minutes to discover that mistake.

As a result, the stamp of "logical contender" was erased from both temporarily at least.

For tomorrow night's engagement, Comiskey has been installed a slight favorite, for some unknown reason. He is a couple of years short in experience, compared to the California collegian, and except for his brief visit with Baer last summer, he had faced no such opponents as those Nova has looked at.

Nova Likes to Slug

In his favor, however, is as good a right-hand "kick" as you'll find in a mule's hoof and a left hook to the body. Although the wind, that is the fact Nova has a complex to go out and slug with anyone he meets—a habit which almost cost him the Baer fight, and which, with his illness, didn't do him any good against Gato.

Promoter Mike Jacobs looks for 140,000 fans to drop $300,000 into the ticket office.

Bill Bennings At The Post

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

There must have been some beefs about the "crowd not being to follow the horses due to the absence of a race announcer.

Yesterday, the order of the horses was flashed on the results board at the different posts and it was big help to Mr. and Mrs. John

Public. The races here are listed on the program by the time they are to be run. For instance, the third race is the "Three o'Clock" race, thank you. For a while yesterday it appeared that the "Three o'Clock race" might start at 4 o'clock. The Belgian horses, used to pull the starting gate got stuck in the mud and the gate was a quarter of a mile from the starting point when the horses came on the track. The track officials sent out a tractor to help the big steeds and they must have taken it as an insult for they dug their hoofs in and finished the job. The track was so sloppy yesterday that we could have let the Flemings take the race track and conducted

member Jockey Earl Pool? He's here and is galloping horses daily.

He is particularly adept at riding

2-year-olds and was born in Cincinatti in 1896, which makes him

44 years old. Whitey Abel, former

Grand Duke. His Honey Cloud

has been turned out. Trainer Lou

Schaeffer is here but, as yet, has not made a connection. He has plans, however. Joe Farrell, general manager of the Bowie and Mariboro tracks, is coming down

next week. Warren Wright's

Whirlaway was on the track yes-

in the sloppy going. The Wash-

for Good Reception, owned by Ed-

Johnson, son of Walter Johnson, former Nat pitcher. She was the

and she's a good one. She's been the previous race. Now for the

First race—The Brady-Emanuel entry of Starweista and Oldwick appears the best guess in the day's open for baby juveniles. Star-weista was second on Wednesday and should improve off that effort.

Bring for the mud and I'm going to

good barn and is dangerous. True

Heart is from the Greenbrier barn.

Second race—Shamrock performed in good fashion at the post and should be prominent in company of this sort. Figures to draw considerable play and I'm going to be there. Pompan has little to recommend except mud ability and that should get him part of the money.

Take Wing for the show end.

Third race—Blue Castle may be

Has shown to warrant a top selection.

Blueness has speed and is the likely favorite but still has the top one. Sea Chanty to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Tucaron was at Pimlico in the mud. If he can repeat this effort, he will take it all for this race. He's a good one.

Very slowly out and closed to be second. Should be a keen factor.

Red Regime promises to get some of the pay.

Fifth race—Cavalleri appears to be the class of this race. Probably like more distance but has a long stretch here that may help. Easter Rabbit is a first time starter but is reported to be a good one. Version will be in the thick of competition.

Sixth race—Moja was third in the Selma Stakes at Laurel and has worked well since. Breaks from the outside and is likely to have the start. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a

good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a good one. He's a

Bank Excess Reserves Soar $220,000,000

Idle Cash in Week Nears Record Total Of $6,840,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday estimated lendable excess reserves of banks jumped $220,000,000 to a near-record total of $6,840,000,000 in the week ended January 8.

The board, which has recommended Congressional action to reduce these funds, said last week's large increase was due mostly to a seasonal reduction in money in circulation and Treasury spending.

The board's statement said: "During the week ended January 8 member bank reserve balances increased $220,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from decreases of $105,000,000 in money in circulation, $145,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, and $9,000,000 in Treasury cash, and an increase of $39,000,000 in gold stock, offset in part by a decrease of $17,000,000 in Federal Reserve Bank credit and an increase of $8,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts.

Excess reserves of member banks on January 8 were estimated to be approximately $6,840,000,000, an increase of $220,000,000 for the week.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended January 8, 1941, were reported as follows:

Shippers Board Hears Attack On Seaway Plan

New York, Jan. 8 (AP)—The Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board opened its seventh annual meeting today with a series of committee reports before 150 delegates at the Baltimore Hotel.

The legislative committee, in a 10-page report, condemned the proposed St. Lawrence seaway and asked the Government to institute fact-finding committees for further research before taking action.

Twelve committees reported tonight at a session at which H. M. Frazier, traffic manager of the F. W. Woolworth company, spoke.

R. V. Fletcher, vice president of the association of American Railroads, will speak against the St. Lawrence seaway project in a luncheon address tomorrow.

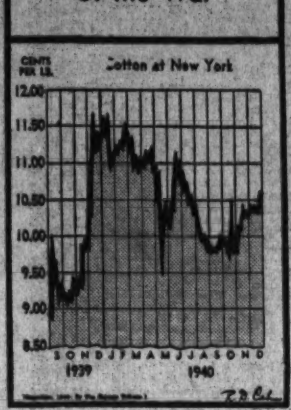

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 9 (AP)—The wheat market got a fractional lift today from buying attributed to mills as well as traders, based their activity on a rise in some securities.

Due to light trade only small orders were necessary to offset a few profit-taking and "short" sales. The market was quiet and the price of wheat was about 1/2 cent higher than yesterday.

Corn closed unchanged to 1/2 cent higher. Soybeans, 1/2-3/4 cent higher. Wheat, 1/2-3/4 cent higher.

Volume in Week Is 145% Greater Than 1940 Period

New York, Jan. 9.—Engineering construction awards this week totaled $157,823,000, the third highest volume since the start of the defense program; Engineering News-Record reported today.

The total was 145 per cent greater than the same week a year ago. An increase in industrial building, including several large munitions plants for the War Department, lifted public awards 154 per cent above a year ago.

Biggest awards of the week were a $23,000,000 smokeless powder plant at Charleston, Ind., and a $15,000,000 ammunition loading plant at Milan, Tenn. Comparisons follow:

Chain Store Sales Highest On Record In Month, Year

New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—December dollar sales of chain stores set a new high record for that month and dollar volume for the year was the largest on record for many years, an analysis of reports from the first 23 firms showed today.

Virtually all of the large mail order houses established new peaks both for December and for the year, leading statistical evidence to earlier estimates that the retail boom brought on by the rearmament program would be felt in all sections of the country. Most of the firms do a Nation-wide business.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $519,000,000.

Peoples Drug Sales Mount In December

Month's Volume Gains $187,982; Year's Total Increases $1,207,059

December sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., increased $187,982, as compared with the same month last year, Treasurer W. H. Churchill reported yesterday. The month's sales totaled $2,791,180, against $2,603,198 in the same 1939 period.

For the 12 months ended December 31, total sales were $32,982,958, against $27,775,927 in 1939. Mr. Churchill pointed out that figures are reported without adjustment for change in number of stores.

Morris Plan Bank Elects: All directors were reelected at the annual meeting of Morris Plan Bank yesterday.

Shareholders of the Enterprise Building Association at the annual meeting this week reelected all officers and directors. Michael A. Keane continues as president with Fred Kraus, vice president, Martin J. Keane, secretary, and James E. Connelly, treasurer.

General Motors emerged at its final quotation of Wednesday and Chrysler was off 1/4. United Aircraft slipped along with Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Owens-Illinois, and Eastman Kodak.

Building in South Reaches New High: Baltimore, Jan. 9 (AP)—Southern construction rose to an unparalleled peak in 1940 through contracts totaling $1,534,356,000, the Manufacturers Record reported today.

Industrial construction alone rose from $162,874,000 to $412,743,000, with Government contracts for factories and "vast expansions in facilities in aircraft manufacturing, steel production, oil refining and power generation" contributing heavily to the advance.

Quick-Delivery Orders Flood Furniture Marts in Chicago: Chicago, Jan. 9.—Manufacturers encountered demands for quick delivery amid a surge of increased buying at Chicago's two big furniture markets today.

Percy Wilson, managing director of the Merchandise Mart, site of the international home furnishings mart, said buyers wanted little time shopping around, preferring to place orders early to assure delivery of the demand swamps production schedules.

Shipping dates for orders placed ranged from immediate to 60-day delivery. Many buyers were reported placing orders with 30 to 60 day delivery in anticipation of a spring rush in home furnishings before prices advance.

Carrier List Spurts Fractions to 3 Points On Hope of Heavy Armament Shipments

New York, Jan. 9.—The long-dormant rails pushed up briskly in the stock market today, followed closely by steels, aircraft, farm implements and specialties.

Carriers, in front throughout, took on additional steam in the final hour and finished with gains of fractions to around 3 points. Advances elsewhere ran to a point or so for favorites, with the majority ending under the day's best.

Motors lagged and utilities, mail orders, coppers and oils jogged over a narrow trail. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was up 4 of a point at 44.9 with the exception of Tuesday, when it was unchanged, the composite has been rising since January 3.

Rails turned over in sizable volume at the last. Previously large blocks of low-priced stocks, usually slightly on the upside, accounted for much of the day's activity. Transfers amounted to $55,890 shares compared with $44,200 the day before.

The huge budget presented to Congress yesterday occupied the main study of Wall Street and, despite brakes expected to be provided by mounting taxes and possible Government controls, thoughts of at least a mild form of inflation began to creep into the market.

Transportation issues responded to the opinion that railways would be less amenable to excess profits taxes than other industries and would benefit substantially by sharp increases in armament shipments.

General Motors emerged at its final quotation of Wednesday and Chrysler was off 1/4. United Aircraft slipped along with Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Owens-Illinois, and Eastman Kodak.

Highs for 1940-41 Reached in Heaviest Deals in 15 Months

New York, Jan. 9.—The investing public went after rail and utility bonds today with a volume of buying which surpassed anything in 15 months and sent some issues two and three points higher.

Transactions totaled $19,835,650, face value, compared with $14,150,200 yesterday, each record setting the best single session's volume since the $20,900,000 of September 27, 1939.

The Associated Press average of 20 selected rails jumped 9-10 of a point, establishing a new 1940-41 high for the fourth day in a row.

The Associated Press index of utilities also was a new 1940-41 high. While the corporate group moved ahead, U. S. Governments, which recently have been on the decline, moved warily among the Federales, however, and the close found these issues 18-32 points higher to 7-32 lower.

Among the corporates riding highest on the buying wave were Boston & Maine 4 1/2s at 23; International Telephone 3s at 45; Illinois Central 4 1/2s at 41; Erie 3 1/2s at 75 at 19; Commonwealth-Edison convertible 3 1/2s at 119; St. Paul 5s at 8 1/2; American & Foreign Power 5s at 37.

Wall Street observers said much of the demand for rails came from investors who saw prospects for profitable railroad operations in newly stimulated defense industries.

Foreign government dollar loans accompanied corporates on the upturn, although transactions in this group were limited. Gains of two to five points were recorded for obligations of new South Wales, Australia and Belgium, and most of the Latin-Americans advanced.

Shippers' Group Bitterly Assails Seaway Proposal: New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—Strong condemnation of new proposals for creation of a St. Lawrence River seaway and power development has been approved for presentation today at the annual meeting of the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board.

The committee report said estimates of the cost of the project ranged all the way from $12,000,000 to $1,350,000,000 and asserted "no body knows" what the cost actually would be.

The report further asserted that the work would be undertaken at a time when costs of labor and materials are the highest because of the war emergency and that the Canadian share of the expense might not be repaid this country for many years because of Canada's present war efforts.

The committee estimated 64 per cent of the cost of the project would be borne by taxpayers who could not benefit from the undertaking, and that the Government's claims for the project were to become manifest.

Week's Clearings Set 10-Year Top: New York, Jan. 9 (AP)—Bank clearings for the Nation reached a new ten-year peak in the week ended January 8 at $7,152,358,000, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Volume for 28 leading cities was up 28.7 per cent, compared with the $5,646,715,000 in the corresponding week last year, and $1,391,312,000 ahead of the preceding five-day week. A factor in the gain was the large amount of payments incident to the first of the month and the year end.

New York clearings for the week were $4,157,622,000, against $3,307,330,000 last year, a gain of 25.7 per cent. The total of the 22 outside cities was $2,994,736,000, a rise of 29 per cent over the $2,339,385,000 for the same week last year.

Wholesale Commodity Index Rises in Week

Must Lower Meat Price, Says Armour & Co. Head

The Bureau of Labor statistics yesterday reported a rise of 0.4 per cent in wholesale commodity prices for the week ended January 4.

The rise was attributed to advancing prices for farm products, particularly grains and livestock, and also advances in chemicals and allied products.

The bureau's index of wholesale commodity prices now stands at 80.2 per cent of the 1926 average.

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 9 (AP)—G. A. Eastwood, of Chicago, president of Armour & Co., told the American National Livestock Association today that packers and cattle raisers can improve their prosperity only by producing and marketing more animals so that the price of meat may be lowered.

"We have a mutual responsibility as stockmen and packers to lower the price of meat," the packing house executive declared.

Inauguration Parade Plans Completed

Two-Hour Display Of Military Might
To Start at 1:45 P. M.

Complete details of the inaugural parade which will begin at 1:45 p. m. January 20 from the southeast corner of the Capitol were announced last night by Brig. Gen. J. N. Greely, chief of staff of the inaugural parade committee.

A crack motorcycle platoon of the Metropolitan Police Department will head the parade, which will be of two-hour duration and featured by a display of our country's military might.

Following the platoon will be Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, U. S. A., grand marshal of the parade. He will be followed in order by Brig. Gen. Greely; the parade staff, Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard; Capt. Jules James, U. S. N.; Col. Pedro A. Del Valle, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. Col. Claude M. Adams, U. S. A.; Capt. Willet J. Baird, U. S. A.; and Lieut. W. B. Millington, U. S. C. G. The staff will be followed by an Army sergeant carrying the flag of the chief of staff, a bugler and two orderlies and a detachment of cavalry from General Headquarters which is the escort of the grand marshal.

Hazen Leads Division

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will lead the first division of the parade. Next will come the marshal's staff, including O. Max Gardner, chairman of the inaugural committee for Governors; Lieut. Col. Nelson M. Walker, U. S. A., chief of the staff, and Thomas P. Morgan, civilian aide. The staff will be followed by the United States Army Band, which will precede the Governors' section. This section will include the District Commissioners and their parties and the Governors and their parties in the order in which their States ratified the Constitution.

Major Gen. Henry C. Pratt, U. S. A., will head the second division, followed by his chief of staff, Col. Carl A. Baehr, U. S. A., and his staff, Lieut. Col. Augustus N. Gurney, G. S. C., and Capt. John G. Ondrick, U. S. A., aide-de-camp. The major general's flag, accompanied by a bugler and two orderlies, will complete the marshal's section.

This section will be followed by mounted colors with two ranks of American flags and two ranks of organizational colors. A color guard will march to the right of each color in the massed formation. The United States Marine Band will come next, followed by a battalion of cadets from the West Point Military Academy, a battalion of midshipmen from the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and a battalion of cadets from the Coast Guard Academy at New London. The mounted Third Cavalry Band will be next in line heading the First Squadron of the Third Cavalry and Battery C of the Fifty-fifth Field Artillery. The Twelfth Infantry Band comes next to head a composite infantry battalion including a rifle company each from the Twelfth Infantry and the Forty-fourth Division; a rifle company of selective service trainees of the Forty-fourth Division, and a heavy weapons company from the Twelfth Infantry.

The United States Navy Band will be the next unit in the second division of the parade. It will be followed by one provisional battalion of United States Marines, a battalion of bluejackets of the Navy, a Coast Guard landing force and detachment with beach apparatus. These forces will be followed by the National Youth Administration Band heading the only civilian marchers, a company of National Youth Administration members, a company of Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees and a company from the Work Projects Administration.

Service Medal Awarded

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB HONORS COLLIFLOWER—James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade, receives from Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, medal committee chairman, the Cosmopolitan Club's Distinguished Service Medal for outstanding District work in 1940. The award was made yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

Flu Outbreak Under Control, U. S. Declares

77,144 Cases Reported
Throughout Nation,
133 in Washington

The United States Public Health Service reported yesterday on the outbreak of a mild form of influenza which has been sweeping over the country for the last several weeks.

In Washington, 133 cases were reported for the first nine days of January, more than the total for the entire month in 1940. Seven cases were reported yesterday.

For the last week alone, the health service received notice of 77,144 cases. Yesterday 800 soldiers at Fort McClellan, Ala., were said to be in the fort hospital stricken with the flu.

The Public Health Service declared that in no State is the situation out of control.

The outbreak, which started in California, has struck hardest at Texas, where 32,083 cases were reported last week. Virginia led the Eastern Seaboard with 1,732 cases.

200 See Club Medal Given To Colliflower

More than 200 civic leaders and city officials gathered yesterday at the Carlton Hotel to honor James E. Colliflower, president of the Washington Board of Trade, as he received the Cosmopolitan Club's distinguished service medal for outstanding public service during 1940.

The club's annual award was presented by Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, former Cosmopolitan president, who originated the idea ten years ago. The ceremonies were broadcast over Radio Station WOL.

In bestowing the club's highest honor to a local citizen, Dr. Biggs compared Colliflower to George Washington, Robert Burns and Victor Herbert—"because in his cosmos he has some of the statesman-general of Washington, more than a smattering of the poetry of Burns and volumes of the music of Herbert."

"The man we honor today has always been gentle to the underprivileged, to his fellows and to those whom he considers his peers—and he always keeps his voice low," Dr. Biggs said. "He has given of his time, his energy, his finances and his kindness of heart in promoting the welfare of his city and in helping to uplift the underprivileged."

In a voice trembling with emotion, Colliflower said he was nonplussed and overwhelmed by the honor, adding: "In any civic work upon which I have entered and pursued, I have done so not with the thought of personal gain or hope of receiving the plaudits of my fellow man, but solely because I enjoyed it, and if, because of this, at least one mortal has been benefitted and elevated, I have received sufficient reward."

At various times Colliflower has served as president of the Police Boys Club, president of the Merchant and Manufacturers Association, exalted ruler of the Elks, grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, grand commander of the Club Alhambra, president of the Cosmopolitan Club and at present is chairman of Draft Board No. 4.
